French Buy 600 Planes, Deny Getting U. S. Secrets

Only Saw Craft Available for Paris, Embassy Says; Deplores 'Mystery'

The French air mission has purchased "a minimum" of 600 new-type war planes from four American manufacturers, a French embassy spokesman said last night, emphatically denying that any United States military secrets had been revealed.

Col. Rene P. G. Weiser, air attache at the embassy, said contracts have been signed for bombers, pursuit ships and training planes, and that each agreement contains options under which the French air ministry may enlarge the orders. Asked if any military secrets were revealed to the air mission, Col. Weiser declared:

"Absolutely not. Everywhere we went we were very carefully guided away from shops where new work was under way. We saw only what we were sold."

Why Get a Jazz Band

The French official revealed that the mission, the activities of which have been the subject of a Senate investigation, sailed for home last night. Declaring he would like to dispel the so-called "mystery" which has been thrown around the group, the air attache said it had carried on its work in the same manner as any other buyer with millions to spend.

Later another embassy source indicated that the orders include 100 Douglas and 115 Glenn Martin bombers, 200 North American planes, which it is understood will carry bombs, and 200 Curtiss Hawks, of which 100 were ordered last June.

The Douglas bombers, he added, are similar to the plane which crashed in California some weeks ago with a member of the French mission aboard and revealed the presence of the mission to the public, but will contain some modifications.

The mission, said Col. Weiser, "has merely been discreet. When you are entering into an important contract, do you provide yourself with a jazz band to attract attention? The mission, like any other purchaser, had to be protected against those who wanted to sell what we did not want."

Apprehensions "Unfounded"

Col. Weiser declared all of the apprehensions of secret dealings and understandings between the American and French governments were unfounded.

"Having had no information of the existence of the mission, public opinion in this country was wrongly alarmed when suddenly it heard of it officially," he declared. "They imagined the worst—secret dealings and arrangements. All of this is wholly unfounded and untrue. The situation is as follows:

"France wished to buy good aeronautical material. Having already had experience with some Curtiss planes which she bought early in 1938, she immediately thought of the United States. The American Government, wishing to improve and develop its aviation industry, and finding that it would not impede production for its own requirements and would not compromise its military secrets, gave permission to France to inspect certain planes which met their requirements.

"Under those conditions, the French mission has completed its work and leaves New York for home on the S. S. Roosevelt tonight."

Whereabouts Detailed

Col. Weiser said the mission really was composed of two parts, the officials who negotiated the contracts and the technical experts who came later and will remain until the planes are ready for delivery. The first group, he said, was composed of Messrs. Monet, R. Hoppenot and Mazen, Col. Jacquin and

A.F.L. Asks New Deal To Remove 'Distrust'

House Democrats Air Differences in 'Pep' Caucus on Defeats

By Robert C. Albright.

In a linen-washing conference that aired party differences all the way from the New Deal left to the conservative right, the House Democratic majority yesterday sought common ground for party "harmony" this session and in the 1940 Presidential elections.

Party solidarity and co-operation with the Administration was the theme note of leaders, but some plain-spoken Democrats took the view that co-operation is a two-way proposition in which the White House has been lagging.

Warnings that Democrats must stand or fall together in the next elections—must co-operate or take a 1940 licking—mingled with a realistic analysis of the last election returns, as leaders exhorted House Democrats to spend more time on the floor battling a well-organized Republican minority.

Prompted by a series of Republican House victories and Democratic factional differences over major Administration issues, the unusual conference developed into an old-fashioned Democratic talk fest with

Bid to Business Is Urged to Cure 'Appaling' Idleness

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 15.—The American Federation of Labor, calling the Nation's unemployment "appalling" today, urged the Administration to remove "fear, lack of confidence and distrust" from the path of industrial expansion, and urged the establishment of credit.

The labor group's executive council in a lengthy statement reviewed 10 years of unemployment affecting from 8,000,000 to 14,000,000 and stressed improved psychology as the best means by which private enterprise may be "accorded the widest opportunity" to absorb the jobless.

The council's declaration was made public by the president, William Green.

Profits Tax Assailed

"Fear, lack of confidence and distrust in governmental, social and economic procedure," the council said, "should be removed." A political and economic state of mind should be created which would enable all financiers and the owners and management of industry to face the future with confidence, willing to risk in the expenditure of funds. . . ."

At a press conference, Green said: "There has been strong complaint against the excess profits tax for one thing. We believe its repeal would help."

The A. F. L. leader assailed what he called "surprising and unexpected" regulations by administrative agencies.

Wants Clear Rules

"The rules of the game should be made clear and plain," he added, "so that when business starts an enterprise no new rules will be issued requiring adjustment and change.

"We have been trying for ten years to find a remedy for unem-

Meanwhile reports that faint signals on the Marine Airways radio frequency had been heard, kept alive hope that occupants of the plane might be found alive.

Bridge Parties Add Hundreds Of Dollars to Blood Bank Fund

In a score of homes and at a public gathering at the Wardman Park Hotel, Washingtonians played bridge last night to improve the city's facilities for combating disease.

The money they paid for tickets increased by hundreds of dollars the fund that will establish a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital. The drive for the fund is being sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV.

The largest party was conducted at the Wardman Park Hotel by the Federal Bridge League. More than 60 persons attended another party at the home of Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell.

Fifteen duplicate tables were played at the bridge league tournament. Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Austin were winners for North-South in the first section, with E. M. Richards and Miss L. A. Ehringer, second. East-West winners in the same section were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Bowker. Mr. and Mrs. Rounds were second.

In the second section, George Hill and Will Fewell took first place with Mrs. Karl Green and Miss Ruth LaFoy second.

The ladies' committee for the St. Valentine's parties, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Winslow B. Van Detanter, included: Mrs. Samuel A. Alexander, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mrs. Samuel F. Beach, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. William E. Borah, Mrs. Crosby N. Boyd, Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Louis G. Pius Laid To Rest in Holy Grotto

Triple Casket Lowered After Solemn Service Into Historic Crypt of Princes of Church

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, Feb. 14.—Pope Pius XI was entombed in a crypt of St. Peter's today with magnificence and solemnity seldom seen in these modern times.

As night fell upon the great, dimly lighted basilica, the Pontiff—invested in a red chasuble and a miter of cloth-of-gold and reposing in a triple casket—was lowered into the grotto beneath the dome.

There the Holy Father was received by some 30-candle-bearing cardinals, and other dignitaries who had descended after the ceremony at the altar of the chair of St. Peter.

In the crypt the Pontiff was laid beside the tombs of popes, kings, cardinals and others who were once mighty on earth.

8,000 at Funeral

About 8,000 persons—church dignitaries, diplomats, officials, priests and humble folk—were present. There were many bright uniforms, all with a touch of mourning black. Those without uniforms, as is the custom of the Continent, wore formal evening attire. The women wore black gowns and veils.

In contrast to the 500,000 or more who had crowded the basilica to pass the bier of the Pontiff during the last three days, those at the ceremony, mostly in the chancel or about the central altar, left vast spaces of Christendom's greatest church unoccupied. Admission was by invitation only.

A procession of prelates, nobles, Swiss guardsmen, chamberlains and choristers first moved slowly to the Chapel of the Sacrament, where Pius XI had lain since Saturday.

Patriarch Presides

Incense was burned and the funeral litter was raised from its red dais and carried to the altar of the chair. The bearer of a silver crucifix led the way. Lines of flickering candles on each side lighted the ashen features of the Pontiff.

Presiding was Patriarch Roberto Vincentini, Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, camerlengo and high priest of St. Peter's, followed closely after the litter.

The cardinals wore purple soutanes and birettas and red skull caps.

Pius XI was placed before the symbolic chair of St. Peter at the extreme end of the nave. Only here was the basilica really bright. The chair and the gilded sunburst above it were dazzling from candles and electric lights.

Here white silk was placed over the face and hands of the Pontiff. The body was sealed in the triple casket with the text of the eulogy

Chinese Bishop Brings Pius' Last Blessing to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Bishop Paul Yu-pin, head of the Nanking, China, Roman Catholic Diocese, has brought to the United States the last blessing given to Americans by Pope Pius XI, who died last Friday.

Bishop Yu-Pin

The blessing, Bishop Yu-pin said yesterday, was in these words:

"Tell those Americans who helped, or who will help the relief work of China, that we willingly give our special blessing to each of them."

Bishop Yu-pin was received in audience by Pope Pius in Vatican City January 18, two weeks before the pontiff was stricken with the illness that carried him to his grave.

Robert E. Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, has sent announcements to friends and associates that he and his wife, Mrs. Olive Freer, are separated. The announcement states they are no longer living together and that the purpose is to "simplify social arrangements."

Mrs. Freer, at her home at 1 Carvel Circle, Westmoreland Hills, Md., denied there had been a formal separation or that one was contemplated.

Nazi Plan Is Accepted On Refugees

$300,000,000 Fund Proposed at London To Aid Emigration To Other Lands

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 14.—The Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees today provisionally accepted a German plan for removing Jews from Germany and authorized establishment of a private international settlement corporation to help pay the $300,000,000 cost.

The committee notified Germany it "will use its best endeavors to develop opportunities within the next five years for permanent settlement of involuntary emigrants from Germany within the limit of laws and practices of the member governments."

It was understood the German plan stipulated:

From 150,000 to 200,000 young Jews would emigrate as soon as possible and would be expected to help their families emigrate later.

The remaining Jews would be permitted to return to their jobs, under certain limitations.

A "proportion" of remaining Jewish property and capital would be put in trust from which emigrating Jews would be able to finance part of their expenses.

Jews would be permitted to buy German goods needed for setting themselves up in new lands.

Jews would be promised no further purge if they "behaved" while the scheme was operating.

An office would be set up in Berlin to supervise "orderly" emigration.

Committee officials emphasized the corporation would have nothing to do with any government or with the central financing organization which Germany proposed.

It was believed the corporation would float a large international loan which the governments represented on the committee likely would be asked to guarantee.

Jews Are Pessimistic

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Feb. 14.—The Jewish delegation was markedly pessimistic today as a result of the latest developments in the Palestine negotiations, which were considered to foreshadow concessions to the Arabs.

Following pressure from Arabs, Prime Minister Chamberlain decided to publish in full the disputed correspondence of 1915 between Sir Henry McMahon, then British high commissioner in Egypt, and Hussein, Sherif and Emir of Mecca, on which Arab claims are based.

At today's meeting with the British delegates the Jews pointed out that 15,000 Jews were serving in Palestine defense units and if war broke out would rally to the defense of the Jewish national home.

Hoodlums Smash Store Windows And Stone Truck

Police last night were hunting a gang of hoodlums who within a few hours smashed three store windows and stoned a truck.

After stoning a number of High's ice cream trucks earlier in the day, four men in an auto successively smashed windows of the High's store at Eighth and Fifth streets northwest; Cherner Motor Co., 1781 Florida avenue northwest, and Phelps-Roberts Corporation, 1825 Fourteenth street northwest.

A group of truckmen at the High's dairy went on strike yesterday, and police were ordered to guard all their vehicles.

Argentina Cuts Imports From U. S. By $31,000,000

Buenos Aires (Wednesday), Feb. 15 (AP).—The Ministry of Finance this morning announced a sweeping curtailment of imports from the United States, totaling $31,000,000.

The announcement, a half-page advertisement in morning newspapers, was the first public explanation of the government's policy of refusing to grant permits to United States importers.

"It is necessary importations from the United States return to the level of three or four years ago if the equilibrium or balance of payments under present conditions be maintained," the announcement said.

2 More Deputies Out; Immunity Is Denied 3 Warring Informers

A Warning Motorists Will Like

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer shows his secretary, Eleanora Arney, the first 25-mile-an-hour speed limit sign issued in accordance with the order by the Commissioners yesterday increasing Washington's speed limit from 22 miles an hour. At least a hundred of these will be erected, Van Duzer said. (Story, Page 6.)

Trio Cited in Jury Fixing Attempt; Laws to Sentence Seven on Tuesday

Two more deputy marshals were suspended early today because of revelations in the Warring testimony.

Earlier Justice Laws dashed hopes of two go-betweens and a juror in the second Warring conspiracy trial who believed they had bought immunity by disclosing their relations with Emmitt Warring, numbers gang boss, who pleaded guilty to four charges of criminal contempt.

The new charges brought to seven the number implicated in the liquor and money bribes and promises with which the numbers operator tried to beat the charge that he and his brothers conspired to defraud the Government of income taxes on their $2,000,000 business.

Three new defendants, free on bond last night after a week in protective custody, were:

Carl T. Denekas, 43, Potomac Electric Power Co. repairman, of 106 Varnum street northwest, $1,000 bond. He was the first juror seated, having concealed his acquaintance with Warring.

Harry Fine, race horse handbook employe, who testified that he took Warring's offer of $600 for an acquittal to Denekas, and arranged for them to meet, $1,500 bond.

Thomas Harrison Quinlan, telephone employe, who said Warring called on him for information about two other jurors, $1,000 bond.

Justice Laws ordered citations against the three, returnable Friday, after ascertaining they were not promised immunity for telling their share in the jury fixing plot.

Warring Awaits Sentence

Emmitt Warring, 34, who assumed blame for the jury fixing and said he was "shaken down" by Fine and Deputy United States Marshal John B. Upperman, 57, was in jail awaiting sentence. Upperman, who was in charge of the two Warring juries and pleaded the gangsters' cause with the first, which deadlocked, admitted guilt on two charges. He was in custody of District Attorney Pine.

Justice Laws indicated he will sentence all seven respondents next Tuesday. The length of the jail terms is limited solely by his discretion.

Assistant District Attorneys Wilson and Fihelly worked late last night with Pine preparing charges against Fine, Denekas and Quinlan. They also drafted criminal contempt charges against Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell. Upperman said both of them paid him bribes.

Attorneys Deny Charges

Whelan and O'Connell indignantly denied the marshal's charges and predicted vindication when Justice Laws hears their case. They quit as Emmitt Warring's lawyers when the jury fixing was imputed to him last week.

Pine said he hoped to file all five of the charges today but that they might not be ready until tomorrow.

Warring and Upperman pleaded guilty Monday. The day and a half of Government testimony that followed was ordered by Justice Laws so that he would know what punishment appeared just.

Meanwhile, United States Marshal John B. Colpoys announced early today that he had suspended Deputies John B. Crawford, 40, and William M. Gates, 35, pending investigation of testimony that they got $5 each from Attorney Harry T. Whelan on Christmas Eve. Upperman said they went with him to claim the money, "an old courthouse custom."

Already suspended was Deputy Clayton Gasque, pending investiga-

'Chip' Robert Faces Georgia Contract Quiz

Voiding of Hospital Agreement With His Firm Is Demanded

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 14.—Georgia Representatives today sought abrogation of a $3,000,000 hospital contract with the engineering company of L. W. (Chip) Robert "as illegal if such action can yet be taken."

Robert, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, is to appear at 2 p. m. tomorrow before House economy investigators to tell of arrangements for construction of new buildings for the State hospital for the insane at Milledgeville, Ga.

A privileged resolution directed the State law department to investigate all phases of a contract entered into by Robert & Co., June 14, 1938, with the State welfare department, and take steps if possible to have it "set aside."

The resolution said Robert's company was to be paid 5 per cent on all money received by the welfare department "for building purposes up to the amount of $5,000,000, and an additional 1 per cent "for promotional work in securing the money from Washington."

Robert Replies

L. W. (Chip) Robert said yesterday "any suggestion that my firm's connection with the Board of Public Welfare (in Georgia) has been other than strictly architectural and engineering service is distinctly and entirely in error."

"The contract is a matter of public record for nearly a year and has been and is subject to any and all review. It is news to me if the State of Georgia, through any department, has any right or authority to pay any money for any promotional purpose of any sort whatsoever, and certainly nothing of this kind has entered into this particular contract."

"It should certainly be of interest to the people of Georgia, to know that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, who are noted for being about the most conservative lending agency of the Government, have reviewed our contract in detail and approved same in full."

Jelleff Fears Parole Budget Cut Aids Crime

Board Unable to Supervise Convicts on Smaller Fund, He Says

Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the Parole Board, yesterday declared frankly that the cut by the District Commissioners in the board's budget was a direct invitation to crimes.

Due to inadequate funds, he said, "scores of men out of prison on parole or conditional release are walking the streets of Washington today without proper supervision."

Expressing "amazement" that the District Commissioners should cut the budget to $17,980 from the $22,500 figure recommended by the board, he said:

"I would interpret this as meaning that the Commissioners don't want a parole system. Certainly, if it is not worth this much, it is not worth anything. We might as well go back to the dark days when prisoners were freed at the gates.

"The board frankly is doing a poor job. It could not possibly do a good one with the money it is compelled to get along with. We are just dragging along, doing a little preparole work and a little supervisory work.

"Some day something is going to happen. A prisoner out on parole will go on a tear and shoot a Senator or Congressman. By the very

Polar Bear Snowy Papa of 2 Hybrids; Kadiak Is Mama

William H. Blackburne, head keeper of National Zoological Park, yesterday announced the arrival of two hybrid bear cubs.

They are the latest offspring of Ramona, the Kadiak brown, and Snowy, the huge polar, who are the parents of three thriving hybrids born just three years ago.

Kadiak-polar hybrids are especially rare. The two species of bear are found several thousand miles apart.

Flu and Pneumonia Outbreak Swamps D. C. Hospitals

Hospital beds were at premium in Washington last night, due chiefly to the large number of pneumonia and influenza cases.

A survey disclosed that every general hospital in the Capital, as well as the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park, Md., and Alexandria Hospital, was filled to capacity, beyond normal capacity or with only a few beds unoccupied.

An unusually a large number of respiratory cases—colds, grip and throat infections—was treated at the clinic of Group Health Association, whose acting medical director, Dr. Mario Scandiffio, said that this is the worst cold and "flu" season in the last five years.

"Filled up," reported Emergency Hospital, a 280-bed institution.

"We have 320 patients tonight," said Garfield, adding that only a few beds are available.

"We've been running to capacity for a week," Children's Hospital reported. "The majority of the medical cases are respiratory diseases."

Gallinger Municipal Hospital said pneumonia cases were running especially high, with the medical-surgical building filled to capacity. Freedmen's Hospital, the city's tax-supported institution for colored sick, had a patient census of 260, with only seven beds empty. A new oxygen tent has been ordered, and is expected to arrive in a few days.

"No private rooms available at present," said Georgetown Hospital.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

TO THE GALLERY.

It's debatable which is the best show in town, the Senate or the House. Each plays to about 2,000 people a day. It's a shifting audience. In the middle of an indignant Senator's speech the thoughtful tourist suddenly realizes "This is where I came in!" and out he goes, looking a little guilty and apologetic.

* * * *

Mrs. Lister Hill
. . . in the gallery

If you like vaudeville or melodrama, go to the House. There the action is as brisk as a Western movie. The oratory comes in samples; speeches are only five or ten minutes long, violent and acrobatic. Unless a Representative has both feet off the ground at least once in an oration, no one believes he's in earnest.

* * * *

But if you like a more sonorous, classical and long-winded type of drama, with a tang of Euripides rubbed in the bowl, by all means, go to the Senate. A Senator knows he can talk as long as he likes. This develops a quiet confidence which, in turn, brings on the phenomenon known as "total recall."

"—talked out, he can lie down"

A Senator, in the midst of a speech, is like a drowning man; his whole life passes before him in a cavalcade; he can remember everything he ever read or heard or suspected. That's the gift of total recall. He can even remember what his grandfather said to James G. Blaine.

* * * *

If he falter, another Senator is always ready to leap to his rescue, like a ship at sea which gets a radio from a disabled freighter.

"Does the Senator yield?"

"I'm happy to yield to the resplendent, effulgent and effervescent Senator from Massconegon."

Another startling illustration of Nazi contempt for truth is the propaganda story headlined "United States Farmers Seek Barter With Reich."

It is notorious that the whole deal was cooked up in the German consulate at Chicago, which attempted to organize "dummy" corporations to handle the American end of a swap of lard and wheat for German machinery.

This seems to have flopped; no American names are even mentioned in the tale. Yet the Nazi version goes "The co-operatives approached Dr. Horst Fricke"—the Nazi commercial attache at Chicago. Which co-operatives?

The Nazis are pessimistic about dumping more harmonicas for American food, but it's good propaganda.

"Isn't it true that in your own State a WPA worker sank up to his hips while fast asleep and had to be pulled out by a tractor?"

"I'm glad my able colleague from Alasippi reminded me of that. It merely illustrates another iniquity of the WPA."

This is one mild form of what is politely known as demagoging.

If the Senator is exhausted by his oration, he can go to the cloakroom and lie down on a black leather couch with a white pillow whose cover is changed every day, sometimes twice a day. You can see him as he rests, through the swinging doors, like Hercules after the sixth of his seven labors.

"—escorting of a constituent"

Most Senators examine the galleries carefully and frequently before they launch an oration. Bigger audiences draw better oratory. Sometimes a few extra pretty faces stimulate Senators to surpass themselves. If you have just seen one of the belles of the Senate, like Mrs. Lister Hill, sit down in the family gallery, you can expect something extra special from the bachelor Senators.

* * * *

Usually you can see a Senator escorting some of his own constituents to the senatorial gallery if he has a set speech coming up. The only spectacle that, to my mind, equals a Senator escorting a pretty constituent to the gallery is a good drum major at the head of an American Legion band.

* * * *

That effulgent statesman from Dixie, Senator Bob Reynolds, summed up the importance of the audience one day when he rose to his feet.

"Mr. President," said he, addressing the Chair, "I have some important observations to make concerning our foreign policy and other matters of deep and immediate moment."

Then he scrutinized the galleries carefully, from the proletarian corner where the stags sit clear around past the tourists, diplomatic, ladies', family and press. They were less than half filled.

"On second thought," he continued, "I will reserve my remarks for a more auspicious occasion."

Action Held Up On Continuing Export Bank

Loans Made to Further Foreign Policy, Taft Tells Senate Committee

By the Associated Press.

After hearing a Republican complain that Government credit facilities are being used to implement foreign policy, the Senate Banking Committee withheld action yesterday on a proposal to continue the Export-Import Bank for two years.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, told the committee the bank's recent loans to China and Haiti "were not a matter of banking or credit but a matter of foreign policy."

He urged that the bank's lending authority be limited to $100,000,000. He opposed a $125,000,000 limit because, he said, the bank may use its funds "to finance an European war without Congress knowing anything about it."

Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, of the Banking Committee, commented that $25,000,000 wouldn't go far toward financing a war.

RFC Is Extended

The committee approved continuance of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation until June 30, 1941, but delayed action on the bank and the Commodity Cridit Corporation until Tuesday.

At today's hearing, Jesse Jones, chairman of both the RFC and the export-import bank, under questioning by Taft about the bank's recently authorized loans of $25,000,000 to China and about $5,000,000 to Haiti, denied that the Chinese loan had been ordered by President Roosevelt. He said it would be used for the purchase of American goods.

In the past, the witness recalled, the bank has advanced $27,000,000 to China, of which $14,400,000 has been repaid. An $800,000 payment of principal and interest was received in December, he said.

Credits for Trade Urged

"Have you made loans to any other foreign governments?" Taft inquired.

Jones answered:

"I don't think we have made any loans that would in any way violate the neutrality act or the Johnson act (forbidding loans to war debt defaulters)."

Wagner read a telegram from President Eugene Thomas of the National Foreign Trade Council urging that the Export-Import Bank's operations be expanded in an effort to counter British, French and German extension of credits in competition for Latin American trade.

Jones testified that the commodity agency lost $94,000,000 between 1933 and 1938 and asked that its borrowing authority be increased from $500,000,000 to $900,000,000.

$212,000,000 Apportioned for Crop Control

The Agriculture Department announced yesterday how it would split a $212,000,000 bounty among producers of cotton, corn, wheat and rice who co-operate with its efforts to reduce farm surpluses.

The money, appropriated by the last Congress for "price-adjustment" payments, will go to growers of these basic crops who plant within their 1939 acreage allotments. The allotments provide for reduction from normal planting of these commodities.

Cotton growers will be paid at the rate of 1.6 cents a pound on cotton; corn, 6 cents a bushel; wheat, 11 cents a bushel, and rice, 12 cents per hundredweight.

The amount to which each grower will be entitled is determined by multiplying the normal production of his acreage allotment by the benefit payment rate. Thus a farmer with a wheat allotment of 100 acres and a normal production of 12 bushels per acre would be entitled to 1,200 times 11 cents or $132, provided he planted no more than 100 acres.

Officials said the payments would be distributed as soon as they could check grower compliance with allotments.

The department estimated the $212,000,000 fund would be divided as follows among the four crops:

Cotton, $84,578,000; corn, $61,613,000; wheat $64,113,000, and rice, $1,696,000. No price adjustment payments will be made on tobacco or other crops.

Cotton was the only crop on which price adjustment payments were made last year. The amount distributed was $130,000,000.

The Gallup Poll

Businessmen's Ideas for Recovery Found More Popular Than the President's

New York, Feb. 14.—Important new evidence that the trend of American public opinion today is toward relatively orthodox economic thinking rather than toward the newer economic views of Administration leaders is contained in the results of an American Institute of Public Opinion survey dealing with the present state of business.

GEORGE GALLUP

Since 1932 the issue has been whether the ideas of business or the ideas of the New Deal should prevail in the attempt to bring about economic recovery. Democratic leaders have contended that the old orthodox views of businessmen put the country into depression and that the New Deal is bringing it out of depression. Does the public share this view? Do the voters look more to the Administration than to big business for help in solving present-day economic problems?

To resolve this issue the American Institute put the following question to a cross-section of voters in every State:

"Do you think that, to create new jobs and reduce unemployment it would be better to follow the ideas of big businessmen or the ideas of the Roosevelt Administration?"

The vote was:

Voters Saying Businessmen	55%
Voters Saying Administration	45

One interesting sidelight is that more than one-third of Democratic voters think it would be better to follow the ideas of businessmen rather than the Administration. The party vote follows:

	Favor Businessmen	Favor Administration
Democrats	36%	64%
Republicans	96	4

If dissatisfaction with the economic ideas of the New Deal increases, there may be important political repercussions. In fact, such repercussions are already beginning to show themselves. The November election showed a marked trend toward the Republican Party in a band of States stretching from New England to the Middle West. And a recent Institute study found that many voters are now beginning to link prosperity and the Republican Party together in their minds. This study asked voters:

"Do you think business would be better or worse today if we had a Republican President?".

Among those who expressed an opinion, the majority said they thought business would be better under a Republican President. The vote of those with opinions was:

Better Under Republican	69%
Worse Under Republican	.40

Virtually all Republicans (96 per cent) with opinions said "better." But as many as one-third (33 per cent) of Democrats with opinions also said "better."

If the trend of sentiment continues away from the economic thinking of the New Deal, it seems clear that the Democrats will face a difficult problem in 1940. They will have to combat the feeling that prosperity would be made more certain by following the ideas of big business and by returning to Republican leadership. And their problem will be intensified if, in 1940, there happens to be a downswing in the business cycle.

N.J. Bank Fails, Depositors to Get 17 Million

FDIC Faces Biggest Reimbursement Job In Its Existence

By the Associated Press.

Jersey City, N. J., Feb. 14.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation tackled the biggest reimbursement job in its five-year history today with the closing of the New Jersey Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

A notice posted shortly before the usual 9 a. m. opening hour on the doors of the bank's main offices here and of five branch banks, announced the State commissioner of banking and insurance had taken "possession of its property and business."

The bank reported total resources of $31,298,478 as of last December 31. Its deposits totaled $23,285,349, of which Banking Commissioner Louis A. Reilly said about $17,000,000 were insured.

The FDIC announced the amount to be paid depositors would be larger than any paid out in any year since the FDIC was created in 1933.

Acacia Life Co. Shows Holders Really Voted; Metropolitan Agents Deny 'Forgery' Testimony

In contrast to the practice of many American mutual life insurance firms, the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., a District institution, was shown in hearings before the Congresional "monopoly" committee yesterday to afford its policyholders ample opportunity to nominate their own candidates for the board of directors and to participate in elections.

Samuel E. Mooers, secretary of Acacia, told the committee that his company sent out full instructions regarding the annual election to each of its 126,000 policyholders—with the result that nearly 25 per cent of those entitled to vote actually cast ballots.

This testimony immediately followed that of Charles Everett Judson, assistant secretary of the New York Life Insurance Co., who stated that his organization made no effort to advise policyholders of their legal right to make independent nominations. Of 1,500,000 persons eligible to vote in the company's last election, 297 availed themselves of the privilege, Judson said.

A table presented by Dr. Donald Davenport, special economic consultant of the SEC, showed the proportion of votes cast to possible votes in the 1937 directorial elections of the 12 largest mutual life insurance companies in the country, was in no case above 2.51 per cent, and in 8 cases was less than eight-tenths of 1 per cent.

The largest company of all, Metropolitan Life, with a possible voting strength of 24,821,000, tallied 437,804 votes, or 1.76 per cent. Testimony offered last week to show that even this total is false, since it is allegedly "common practice" for Metropolitan agents to forge policyholders' signatures on the ballots, was the couse of a flurry in the committee rom yesterday.

At the close of the hearings, Samuel I. Roth, president of the Employes Fidelity Organization, a union of Metropolitan agents in the New York area, attempted to make a statement denying that the forgeries were widespread. In an effort to silence Roth, who persisted in talking, Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, acting chairman of the committee, warned him: "I don't want to ask the guards to put you out of here, but I'll do it if you don't keep quiet."

After refusing to hear Roth, the committee went into executive session to determine whether it would accept his statement. Decision on this point was expected at the reopening of hearings this morning.

Roth claimed that 100 agents—representing 89 New York agencies and over 1,000 individuals—had accompanied him from New York at their own expense "to refute testimony concerning the alleged forging of ballots and proxies of policyholders in the company election of directors."

Roth denounced the Metropolitan agents who last week testified that signatures on ballots for the single slate of directors were frequently forged.

"We refuse to stand idly by to be branded as forgers and crooks by a band of 11 men, every one of whom is a member of the C. I. O.," Roth said in his statement. "We refuse to stand idly by while a union attempts to advance its own interests by means of the voice of your committee." The testimony is "part of an organized campaign for union expansion," Roth charged.

U. S. to Give Latin America Military Aid

Army Officers Going To Republics; Navy Plans Good Will Tour

By the Associated Press.

A far-reaching program, under which the United States will station more military representatives in Latin-American republics and give assistance to those countries, is about to go into effect.

Within a few months, the United States will have 29 officers of the Army, including the Air Force, in Latin America, in addition to American naval attaches and missions.

Also, the United States will send a half dozen cruisers and four destroyers on a good-will visit to South America in the spring, the Navy Department announced yesterday. The trip is scheduled to begin at the conclusion of the war games now in progress in the Caribbean Sea.

Coeval With Aranha Visit

Coming at a moment when the Brazilian foreign minister, Oswaldo Aranha, is in this country talking defense and other questions with American leaders, the program is described by officials as having profound significance.

It means a determined attempt on the part of the Administration to offset the attempts by totalitarian states to penetrate Latin America through military representatives and missions.

In many cases the American Army officers accredited to Latin-American states will be directing or assisting in the military colleges of the republics.

At present there are 22 American Army officers in Latin-American nations, as follows: Argentina, 9; Brazil, 5; Central America, 2; Haiti, 2; Mexico, 1; Cuba, 1; Colombia, 7; Chili, 1.

Increases are scheduled as follows: Nicaragua, 1; Haiti, 1; Honduras, 1; Venezuela, 1; Peru, 1; Mexico, 1; Brazil, 1.

Foreign Minister Aranha, of Brazil, is expected to return home with an agreement by United States officials to facilitate the sale of airplanes and probably anti-aircraft material to his country. Brazil is regarded by officers here as being the most vulnerable of the Latin-American states because, projecting far into the Atlantic, it is the nearest to Europe.

Navy Makes Plans

The Navy also disclosed yesterday that it would strengthen its new Atlantic squadron after the games by addition of four 10,000-ton heavy cruisers. No reason was advanced for the decision.

The four vessels are the Houston, the San Francisco, the Quincy and the Tuscaloosa. They will become a part of a force which already includes some 30 war craft. The Houston will take President Roosevelt to the Caribbean for the maneuvers.

Navy officials said some of the eight new light cruisers which now form part of the Atlantic squadron, would be shifted to the Pacific when the main United States fleet returned to the San Pedro-San Diego area in May.

Douglas, Fahy Mentioned for Supreme Court

Roosevelt Expected To Take His Time, Name a Westerner

President Roosevelt probably will be obliged to take geographical considerations into account in naming a successor to Justice Louis D. Brandeis, who resigned Monday from the United States Supreme Court, it was stated in a responsible quarter yesterday.

This is due to the pressure from the West, which is without representation on the court.

Administration sources expect the President to take his time and appoint to the court an outstanding man from the region west of the Mississippi River. It is doubtful whether he will make the appointment before he returns March 4 from his trip to the Caribbean to watch the fleet maneuvers.

Possible appointees mentioned for the first time yesterday were Charles Fahy, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, and Chairman William O. Douglas, of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Fahy is formerly from New Mexico and Douglas from Washington State. Fahy has strong support from associates, while Dougles' constructive work as head of the SEC is regarded as an outstanding Administration achievement.

Other possibilities previously mentioned are Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the District; Justice Sam G. Bratton, of the Tenth Judicial District, former Senator from New Mexico; Wiley Blount Rutledge, jr., dean of the law school of Iowa State University, and Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington.

Philip H. Ward, 90, Oldest D. C. Mason In Service, Dies

Philip H. Ward, 90, the oldest Mason in point of service in Washington, died suddenly yesterday in Round Hill, Va., where he had been visiting since October.

A native of Washington, Mr. Ward was employed in the office of the collector of taxes, from which he was retired 15 years ago. He had been a member of Hiram lodge of Masons for more than 60 years and its treasurer for 50 years.

He leaves four sons: Dr. William K. Ward, of Detroit; Philip H. Ward, jr., of Philadelphia; Ralph P. Ward, of Columbus, Ohio, and George H. Ward, of Washington. Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday from the Gawler's funeral home. Burial will be at Oak Hill Cemetery.

Va. Party Leader Slain in Duel With Deputy Friend

Dungannon, Va., Feb. 14.—A pistol duel in a filling station here today between two men described as "the best of friends," brought death to a prominent young businessman and critical wounds to a Scott County deputy sheriff.

John S. Blackwell, 28, president of the Scott County Young Democratic Club and operator of a general store, died a few minutes after two bullets had penetrated his right side.

Deputy Sheriff B. F. Sluss, 55, was in a critical condition in a Coeburn hospital with a bullet wound 2 inches below the heart and two others in the back.

Dr. O. E. Bivens, who acted as coroner, said he was unable to determine the cause of the shooting.

Blackwell is survived by his wife and two children.

Sluss has a wife and one son.

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Caroline Paulding Ray, who died yesterday at the Epiphany Church Home, will be held at 11 a. m. today at Epiphany Church, with the Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips officiating. Burial will be private.

One of the few remaining "cave dwellers" of Washington society, Mrs. Ray had made her home here for more than half a century. She was the widow of Ensign Robert Clary Ray, U. S. N., who served in the hyydrographic office after graduation from Annapolis. He died in 1899.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often turns out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

House Pushes $376,000,000 Army Program

Hiram Johnson Assails Roosevelt Tactics, Demands Publicity

By the United Press.

The House yesterday pushed President Roosevelt's $376,000,000 Army expansion program toward enactment today or tomorrow after Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, sponsor of the measure, urged its adoption as a guarantee against invasion of the Western Hemisphere.

May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, opened debate on the measure which would authorize strengthening of Panama Canal Zone fortifications, increase Army personnel, place experimental war orders in private industry, and give the Army 5,500 first-line combat planes within two years.

Meanwhile, a Senate military subcommittee approved a bill by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, authorizing expenditure of $25,000,000 to purchase strategic materials to be stored for wartime. Purchase could be made of such materials as rubber, manganese, tin and tea.

At the same time Senator Johnson, white-haired California Republican and leader of the Senate isolationist bloc, charged that President Roosevelt was using dictatorial tactics to keep his foreign policy secret and is risking American involvement in war through clandestine international deals.

Johnson, who favors a thorough airing of Administration co-operation extended a French airplane-buying mission, issued a formal statement.

He took direct issue with the President and the majority action of the Senate Military Affairs Committee which on Monday refused to make public the record of its inquiry into the French plane transactions, and declared the people were entitled to know "every bit of the testimony save that relating to possible military secrets."

"There is resentment among the Administration that anybody should ask the facts," Johnson said. "But if there comes war it will not be fought by the President alone but by the common people of this land, and they will do the fighting and the dying.

Would Stagger Purchases

"This was not a mere commercial transaction. The facts obviously prove it and the explanation given for the secrecy might better have been left unsaid."

A spirited Republican fight to stagger purchases of planes over a three-year period for economic and production reasons, appeared the only obstacle to quick House approval of the defense bill. The Republicans maintain that because of the speed at which new planes become obsolete, large purchases in a short period of time would be impractical and uneconomical.

This phase of the program was gone into by Representative Andrews (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the committee, and Representative James W. Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, chairman of the special House Committee on National Defense.

"Peace Bill," Says May

May said that while the United States was in no immediate danger of attack, the time might come when the dictatorships of Europe would overpower Great Britain and France, and subsequently be enabled to establish military bases in the new world.

"This is a peace bill, not a war measure," he said, declaring the plane program is necessary because of proximity of European air fleets to this country.

For instance, he said, Berlin is 13¼ hours from New York by air, London but 11½, while the Azores lie only 8¾ hours from Washington.

"No Belligerence"

Wadsworth indorsed the item for $23,750,000 to bolster the Canal Zone defenses and the $32,500,000 authorization for the Army to place "educational" orders with private manufacturers. He also approved the increase in Army personnel and the program for training 10,000 civilian pilots annually at a cost of $10,000,000.

"In our attitude there is no evidence of partisanship or belligerence," he said.

However, Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, said that the present bill was "just another cry of wolf."

Representative Arends (Republican), of Illinois, asked why the military committee did not call plane manufacturers to testify and why it did not hear "Louis Johnson, the Assistant Secretary of War, who runs all over the country talking about national defense."

Japanese Move to Seize All Hainan Island; Land Sailors Despite Anglo-French Action

Map shows the controversial island of Hainan, southwest of Hongkong near important British and French empire routes. While Nippon forces moved speedily after landing in the southernmost tip of the island, the United States destroyer John D. Edwards arrived at Hoihow, northern Hainan port, to help Americans

By the Associated Press.

Hongkong, Feb. 14.—Japanese forces moved quickly today toward complete occupation of Hainan, southern Chinese island near important French and British Empire routes and 750 miles due west of Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands.

Japanese naval units, with aviation support, landed at Yulinkan on Hainan's southernmost tip and in six hours penetrated 15 miles inland.

The occupation of northern Hainan points began Friday and brought prompt action by France, Great Britain and the United States.

(Japanese Foreign Minister Arita told British Ambassador Craigie Japan probably would hold Hainan until the end of the Chinese war and possibly indefinitely on grounds of military necessity, and on Monday gave virtually the same reply to French Ambassador Henry.

(The United States destroyer John D. Edwards arrived at Hoihow, north Hainan port, to investigate and give whatever protection is needed to Americans on the island.)

Neutral observers said they saw no connection between the penetration of southern Hainan and the Chinese-Japanese war. Yulinkan is more than 200 sea miles from China proper, but commands Tonking Gulf, which heretofore has been considered in the French sphere of influence.

Capt. Paul Chemidlin. Mazer, he stated, went back to Paris two weeks ago, while the others, except Capt. Chemedlin, are on the high seas. The latter, he explained, is still in the hospital in Los Angeles recovering from injuries suffered in the California crash.

The second group is now in Washington, Col. Weiser revealed. It consists of engineers from the French air ministry, who will remain to supervise the installation of instruments and equipment and study methods of equipping the planes with French-made armament. He stressed that the planes will have French bombs and guns.

"I wish you would say," he continued, "that the French mission was very much impressed with the high rate of production of American plane factories."

Glenn Martin Explains

Baltimore, Feb. 14 (AP).—Glenn L. Martin, while declining comment on reports the French government had ordered $20,000,000 worth of warplanes from him, said today his plant was being expanded.

"We are employing more men and we are creating more parking space for automobiles and making some other improvements," he said.

Japan Reported Getting Ready for Clash With Russia

Peiping, Feb. 14 (AP).—Military observers tonight described current Soviet-Manchukuo border clashes as only mild outbreaks, but expressed belief that Japan steadily is improving her position to have it out with Russia.

The border fights, reports of fresh Japanese units moving to the frontier and belligerent statements in Tokyo have sharpened interest in the old question: Will Japan tackle Russia while still at war with China? Competent students of affairs say the answer may come soon.

(The lower house of the Japanese Parliament has demanded a stronger policy against Russia, and today adopted such a resolution, drafted by all political parties, after fiery speeches, some of which urged use of force against the Soviet Union.)

Socialists Ask Bonnet Reveal 'Secret' Deals

Parleys to Settle Italy's Claims Charged; Franco Recognition Blocked

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 14.—The powerful Socialist group in the Chamber of Deputies demanded tonight that the government explain reports of "secret negotiations with Germany and Italy," a few hours after anti-Fascists in the cabinet had balked plans for immediate joint French-British recognition of the Spanish insurgents.

The unanimous Socialist decision, supported by other opposition deputies, resulted from charges printed by Deputy Henri de Kerillis in the newspaper Epoque, and by other newspapers. De Kerillis charged Foreign Minister Bonnet had sent emissaries to Rome and Berlin to seek a settlement of Italy's territorial claims on France.

Bonnet Denies Charge

Although Bonnet's office issued a denial that "there are negotiations engaged in between France on the one hand and Germany and Italy on the other," the Socialists stuck by their guns.

Fernand de Brinon, Paris newspaperman often mentioned in Parliament as the government's "unofficial ambassador to Germany," told the Associated Press his talks with Nazi leaders had convinced him "there are serious possibilities for negotiations and peaceful settlement" between the Rome-Berlin and Paris-London camps.

De Brinon was one of those cited by De Kerillis and by newspapers as serving as a "secret agent" for Bonnet.

Envoy Angry, May Quit

The French Ambassador at Berlin, Robert Coulondre, was reported to have threatened to resign because, it was said, De Brinon conferred with German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop without his knowledge.

Bonnet's plans for immediate French and British recognition of insurgent Gen. Franco, though supported by Premier Daladier, ran into the opposition of such ministers as Cesar Campinchi, marine; Paul Raynaud, finance; Georges Mandel, colonies, and Jean Zay, education.

There were indications that the British ministers tomorrow might decide on recognition of Franco, but withhold announcement of the action until the insurgents had given satisfactory guarantees of Spain's future independence.

Franco Regime Reorganized

Berne, Switzerland, Feb. 14 (AP).—The Swiss federal council announced today recognizance of the Spanish insurgent regime as the official government of Spain.

Walsh to Reply Friday to Nazi Attack on Pius

The editorial in last Saturday's Voelkischer Beobachter, semiofficial German newspaper which attacked Pope Pius XI in announcing his death, will be answered by Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, on Friday at the opening lecture in his annual services in Memorial Continental Hall.

"The grossness of the attack," Dr. Walsh declared, "is only equaled by its ineptness."

"The fact that the spiritual grandeur of the father of Christendom 1 sabove and beyond the reach of the neurotics of Berlin does not mitigate the shame of the offense," he added.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to cure it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Origin of Igneous Rocks Explained

Origin of the earth's igneous rocks, formed by the colling of hot molten masses called magmas, was discussed last night by Dr. J. F. Schairer, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, at the first of its winter series of lectures.

Granites, basalts and other igneous rocks from the framework of the earth's crust and from them all other rocks were formed through the action of air, water and heat, he pointed out.

NO, we're not trying to beat the gun—we'll be seeing quite a lot of winter before the spring buds burst.

But spring always has come—and with it a sudden itch to get out and see the awakening world. And also—all too often—the sad discovery that to get the new car you want, you've got to wait till a flock of others get theirs!

So what? So take steps now—to meet spring halfway!

Forget that old, worn-out notion that there's a season for buying cars and a season for not buying cars!

Take steps to retire that slow-motion number you're driving now—and replace it with a Buick bursting with newness and get-up-and-git.

Put a Dynaflash straight-eight under your toe to do battle with tough winter going—get the comfort of BuiCoil Springing to float you smoothly over rough and rutted roads.

Get a new outlook for winter horizons or for spotting the first flush of green on the meadows in Buick's "visibility unlimited," which gives you as much as 412 more square inches of safety plate glass to see through.

Then consider also: Your present car is worth less each day as a trade-in. The risk of repair bills grows steadily greater. Old rubber's dangerous, tired batteries a bore—and a bright new Buick is sound and supple all through.

Besides—the cost of keeping up an old car will go a long way toward meeting your monthly payments on a new one. And Buick's prices—as of course you know—are lower than a year ago, lower than you'd expect, lower than some sixes!

So why not drop in to talk it over? You'll probably want to get your Buick while the getting's good!

Pontifical Mass To Be Said At C. U. Today

Leading Members of Hierarchy to Attend Rites for Pius

The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to the United States, will celebrate solemn pontifical mass of requiem for Pope Pius XI at 10:30 a. m. today in the crypt of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on Catholic University Campus.

Leading members of the hierarchy will participate in the rites for the late Pontiff, which will be broadcast via NBC stations over the Nation, to South America and to Rome.

Two special masses also will be sung at Georgetown University this morning.

Many to Take Part

At the Catholic University sanctuary the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, university rector, will deliver the eulogy. Ecclesiastical dignitaries who will take part in the ceremony include the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, O. P., archbishop of Cincinnati; the Most Rev. Thomas J. Walsh, archbishop of Newark; the Most Rev. Bartholomew J. Eustace, bishop of Camden; the Most Rev. James Kearney, bishop of Rochester; the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, bishop of Savannah-Atlanta; the Most Rev. William A. Griffin, auxiliary bishop of Newark; the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore; the Most Rev. Michael J. Keyes, S. M., titular bishop of Aeropoli; the Most Rev. Constantine Bohachevsky, Ukrainian Greek Catholic diocese; the Most Rev. Paul Yu-Pin, bishop of Nanking.

Diplomats Invited

Invitations have been extended to the diplomatic corps, Cabinet, Supreme Court, Congress, and ranking Washington officials. Catholic University faculty, superiors of the affiliated religious houses, the sisterhood, arch diocesan clergy and students will all join in the rites. Because of limited capacity of the crypt, admission will be by ticket only.

The university choir, under direction of Dr. Leo Behrendt, will offer "Missa et Absoluto Pro Defunctis," by Pietro Yon; "Messa da Requiem," by de Lorenzo Perosi, and "Deus Ire."

Mass at 8 A. M.

The Rev. John E. Grattan, S. J., dean of liberal arts college, will celebrate solemn mass of requiem before Jesuit members of the faculty and resident students of Georgetown University at 8 a. m. in Dalghren Chapel. The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., university president, will attend.

Low mass will be celebrated for students and lay members of the faculty at 9 a. m. by the Rev. William Mulcahy, student councilor for the medical college.

Pius Laid to Rest in Grotto Under St. Peter's Beside Kings and Rulers of Christendom

8,000 Dignitaries And Humble Folk At Funeral

Suspended by heavy ropes from a wooden frame, the triple casket containing the body of Pope Pius XI is lowered into the grotto beneath St. Peter's, where he was entombed yesterday. This is the place he slctd to "find sweet repose" and copies of medals struck during his pontificate.

Here also the eulogy was read in Latin by Mgr. Antonio Bacci, secretary of the briefs. It summarized achievements in Pius' reign, especially the progress of missions and the reconciliation of the Holy See and Italy in 1929. It concluded with a prayer that the Pope be granted eternal peace—a supplication taken up by the choir.

Cardinals Pass Bier

The rites reached a climax as the cardinals and bishops filed slowly past the casket, over which each made the sign of the cross.

Beats of the big bell above the Basilica echoed through the archways. A crude wooden frame, equipped with heavy ropes and pulleys, was used to lower the casket to a funeral carriage on the floor of the grottoes with the rhythmic slowness that had marked the whole ceremony.

The ceremony started at 4 p. m. (10 a. m., E. S. T.) and lasted two hours and a half.

Throughout, the organ was silent. The only music was the chanting of choristers—some in the procession and some high in the balconies.

As the Pontiff was borne away from the Chapel of the Sacrament the choir of the Julia Chapel chanted the "Miserere." The chant was stopped when the bier bearers laid their burden on a velvet-covered wooden couch before the altar in the Chapel of the Choir. Then the "Exultabunt Domino" which marked the start of the procession was repeated, followed by "In Paradisum."

Imparts Absolution

Thereafter a prelate chanted and imparted the absolution and the choir intoned the "ingrediar." As the Pontiff was lifted from the bier to be placed in the casket the choir chanted the psalm "Sicut Servus."

The sealing of the triple casket was a lengthy ceremony. First the inner casket of cypress was closed and tied with two ribbons of violet silk, the knots of which were sealed with wax. The cover of the middle casket, that of lead, was bent down, soldered along its edges, and sealed. The outside casket, of elm, was closed with gold-palted screws.

Nazis Warn Vatican

Berlin, Feb. 14 (U.P.). — Das Schwarze Korps, mouthpiece of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's elite "S. S." stormtroops, today warned the Vatican and Germany's four Catholic cardinals of trouble ahead if Pope Pius XI's successor pursues anti-Nazi activities.

Naziism will continue to "ruthlessly pillory" every attempt by the church to concern itself with the external and internal affairs of Germany, regardless of whether the new Pope is inclined to drop the fight with the Nazis, continue it along the lines pursued by Pius XI or prosecute it more forcefully, the Stormtroop organ said.

adding that there were only a handful of vacancies in the open wards.

Episcopal Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital, a 103-bed institution, said its present occupancy is about 85 per cent. An appreciable percentage of the patients show influenza symptoms.

National Homeopathic Hospital reported it is turning down prospective patients daily for lack of space. "We have a lot of pneumonia and influenza," a supervisor said. This is the smallest general hospital in Washington, with 70 beds.

Sister Rosa, superintendent of Providence, said respiratory disorders are responsible for the large census there.

Pneumonia is largely responsible for the capacity house at George Washington University Hospital, all of whose 92 adult beds are filled.

Sibley reported "very few vacancies," one of them in the medical wards, where pneumonia and grip cases are lodged.

"Highest census ever," volunteered Alexandria Hospital, all of whose ward beds were occupied last night.

Washington Sanitarium said it is treating relatively little pneumonia, but a lot of influenza. The institution is operating close to its capacity of 170 patients.

Gifford Pinchot, twice Governor of Pennsylvania, was sued in District Court yesterday for $10,421.42 allegedly due a Philadelphia printing concern on bills incurred in his unsuccessful bid for the Republican nomination for Governor early last year.

Pinchot, who was represented as trading with the firm—John R. McFetridge & Sons of Philadelphia—as the Pinchot for Governor State Committee, according to the suit, paid $5,000 to the company last April 21 on a debt of $15,421.29.

Among items listed as still unpaid for were 1,800,000 platforms; 20,000 letter heads in two colors; 12,200 letter heads in one color; 95,000 placards, and 20,000 copies of "Clear the Tracks for Pinchot," "folded three times to fit envelope."

D. C. Boosts Speed Limit To 25 Miles

To Be Enforced 'To Letter;' Slower Driving Predicted

The Commissioners yesterday boosted Washington's 22-mile-an-hour speed limit to 25 miles, effective ten days from today.

At the same time the Commissioners approved a bill placing parking meters on a permanent basis. The bill will be sent to Congress for early action. The 309 meters now serving are on an "experimental" basis.

In discarding the 22-mile limit—established by Congress March 3, 1925—the Commissioners warned the new limit will be enforced rigidly except in outlying sections where the 30-mile limit remains.

Speed Reduction Predicted

Proposed repeatedly by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and recently advocated by the Traffic Advisory Council, the new limit actually will tend to reduce speed for the majority of District motorists, it was predicted.

Ordering strict enforcement of the 25-mile law, Commissioner Hazen pointed out that few drivers now observe the 22-mile rule and arrests are seldom made for any speed under 30 miles. By adopting the new limit as "absolute" in certain sections of the city, Hazen said he felt rigid enforcement would bring a new degree of observance.

Van Duzer Concurs

In this, Van Duzer concurred.

"I don't feel we have increased the limit," said Van Duzer. "Rather I feel we have taken a step to reduce it in the congested downtown areas. The average motorist seldom observes the 22-mile rule and with hard and fast enforcement of the 25-mile limit I feel certain we will find greater co-operation from the motorist who has a tendency to 'step on it.'"

Washington's 22-mile speed limit has long been looked upon as antiquated by other municipalities. The new law will conform with uniform limits adopted by other urban centers.

Prior to 1931, District speed laws were fixed by Congress. An amendment to the traffic act, however, vested authority in the Commissioners to regulate speeds. When the 22-mile limit was first adopted, it was described as a "compromise"— certain officials advocated 20 miles, others 25.

"And," added Van Duzer, "when the 22-mile limit was first adopted by Congress, cars were equipped with mechanical, two-wheel brakes. Since then, hydraulic and other forms of four-wheel brakes have become almost universal, eliminating a great deal of danger at higher speeds."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, said he welcomed the new law and would enforce it "to the letter."

"A speed limit with an established maximum," he said, "is far better than a limit which is discretionary with the individual driver or police officer."

It was pointed out also that the 22-mile limit very infrequently was upheld in court and convictions were seldom obtained unless a motorist was accused of driving at a speed approaching 30 miles an hour.

43 Lose Licenses

Forty-three motorists lost their driving privileges yesterday for offenses under the District financial responsibility law. Offenses included 35 driving while intoxicated, two hit and run and six judgments, according to the Traffic Department. Permits and registrations were suspended against the following persons:

2 More Deputies Suspended; 3 Warring Informers Cited

Warring

tion of a charge that he allowed photographers access to a prisoner in his custody on the way to Atlanta Penitentiary.

Crawford has been a deputy seven years and Gates four.

Denekas was first on the stand yesterday. He told how on Sunday, January 29, Fine telephoned him and then came to his house.

"I see you're on the jury now," he said Fine told him. "How would you like to make $600."

"Don't let's talk about it here," Denekas said he replied. They left the house and Fine saw Denekas' new car and learned several hundred dollars still was due on it.

"That will all be taken care of," said Fine.

"I hope so," responded Denekas.

Next day, said Denekas, Fine met him and bought him a pint of whisky. That night Denekas drank two beers while he waited in a Connecticut avenue lunch room to meet Fine and a friend. The friend turned out to be Emmitt Warring. They drove to the Brown Derby night club, went in the back way and Denekas had two Scotches and sodas.

Emmitt followed him to the washroom, said Denekas, and said "What are you going to do for me?" "I'm not going to do anything for you, but I'll do anything for Harry," Denekas said he replied.

Denekas Offered $100

Warring offered him $100, said Denekas, but he went back to his table without taking it, telling Warring "I don't want anything to do with it."

When cross-examined by F. Joseph Donohue, Warring's counsel, Denekas said he met Fine in a pool room years ago and then had been friends since then. He thought Fine was mixed up in the Warring case someway, he said.

"I'll do anything for Harry," Denekas said on the stand yesterday. He said that until approached in the Warring case, he had not seen Fine for about a year and a half.

Justice Laws reminded Denekas that when questioned he was asked whether he knew Emmitt Warring and did not say so. Denekas told the court he could not see Warring plainly and did not recognize him. Denekas admitted the conversation linking the Warring case and $600 for himself was "unusual."

"Didn't you think it was your duty to tell the court?" "It ought to have been," Denekas acknowledged. He then said he intended to tell the judge about it several times before the trial and while he was sitting as a juror, but never got around to it. Finally "it just sort of came over" him at the Continental Hotel, where the jury was locked up, Denekas said.

Shown Jury List

Next to testify was Quinlan, who said Warring sent for him and showed him a jury list, asking whether he knew any of those listed. "You know you can do business with me," Quinlan said Warring told him, and he replied, "I know it."

Quinlan said he indicated two fellow employes of the telephone company, Edward D. Spedden, 40, of 2412 Chain Bridge road, and Robert L. Sayles, 31, of 4706 Eighth street northwest. He said Warring asked questions about Spedden but not whether he could be influenced.

Quinlan said he never spoke to Spedden and that he consulted Charles Edward Quillin about Sayles.

Donohue asked, "Did Warring use the word 'fix'?" Quinlan said, "No." "Did Warring ever do more than to ask you to find out the general character of these two men?" "No."

Quillin, who lives at 219 Upshur street northwest, testified Quinlan called him on January 23 and asked, "Do you think Sayles could be fixed?" Quillin said he replied in the negative and urged Quinlan to have nothing to do with such a scheme.

Warring Gives Version

Warring returned to the stand to give his version of the story of these three witnesses. He said he feared he might have made some enemies of some of the prospective jurors and wished to inform himself about them.

"You want the court to believe," interrupted Justice Laws, "that you merely wanted to know what kind of jurors they would make?" Warring said that was his only idea.

Warring said when he talked to Denegas the juror told him, "I can't promise you an acquittal, but I'll do the best I can."

Rebuffed $100 Offer

After Denekas left them, said Warring, Fine asked him for $500 and rebuffed an offer of one $100, so Warring raised it to $250.

"It looked as though I had to give him the $500," said Warring. "He was a good friend of Denekas. I was in the middle. I had an idea he would go back to Denekas. If he hadn't taken the $250, I would have given him the $500."

Warring said it was Fine, who came to him with the offer to contact Denekas, and denied that he started the negotiations.

Attorney Whelan told the Court that prominent lawyers whom he and O'Connell wished to have testify for them were out of town. "It is only fair that you should have every opportunity to present your defense," Justice Laws replied. He said if Whelan and O'Connell were not ready for hearing Friday, he would grand a continuance.

No Immunity Promised

The Court then learned that no immunity was promised the witnesses and said:

"This involves a most serious offense, one which strikes right at the heart of rendering justice. I feel that Fine, Quinlan and Denekas should be placed in custody and the district attorney should prepare contempt rules against each of them, returnable Friday. That is my order."

Warring's brothers, who shared the courtroom spotlight a few days ago, were lost in the crowds outside the court yesterday. When asked why he was not listening to the hearing, Charles (Rags) Warring, 30, once in prison as the gang trigger man, answered, "They won't let me in. They say there are no seats left."

Leo Paul Warring, 35, and Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax expert who is the fourth criminal conspiracy defendant, were not seen at court.

Parley to Fight Rackets

A drive against number racketers in this area will be planned by police officials of the District, Maryland and Virginia today in the office of Commissioner Hazen. The conference will get under way at 2 p. m.

Commissioner Hazen, who inaugurated the conference, said yesterday "the racket boys had better clear out of town." In the past local police officials have been powerless to pursue law-breakers across State lines. The Commissioner said he favored a plan whereby local law enforcement officers could cross State lines in "hot pursuit" of the law-breaker.

An arrangement whereby a nonresident held on a traffic violation could post his driving permit in lieu of collateral will also be on the agenda.

Among those who will attend the meeting are: Police Maj. Brown, Corporation Counsel Seal, Traffic Director Van Duzer, William C. Walsh, attorney general for Maryland; Abram P. Staples, attorney general of Virginia; Benjamin G. Wilkinson, jr., State's attorney of Prince Georges County; Paul Brown, Commonwealth's attorney of Fairfax County; Laurence W. Douglas, Commonwealth's attorney of Arlington County; Judge McMahon of the District Police Court; U. S. District Attorney Pine, and John P. Colpoys, United States marshal.

Jelleff Fears Aid to Crime In Parole Board Budget Cut

Parole

law of averages, something is bound to happen which will shock the city.

"Then there will be an avalanche of criticism. The parole system, and the board, will be blamed.

Calls Situation "Dangerous"

"Nobody realizes more than the board how dangerous this condition is. The District Commissioners, the Budget Bureau, and the House and Senate District Committees, are aware of this situation. If something happens, the board is going to say they are to blame."

In refusing to approve an item of a few hundred dollars to buy a low-priced automobile for board field officers, Mr. Jelleff said, the Commissioners are following "a penny wise and pound foolish policy."

"A businessman would have better sense," he said, "than to pay employes salaries in this scale ($1,800 to $2,100 a year) and then force them to spend their time traveling around the city on street cars. The District auditor ought to know better."

The board, is was disclosed, had asked for two additional field officers, one assistant parole officer at the reformatory at Lorton, and a stenographer. Under the budget approved by the Commissioners it would receive one additional field officer and a stenographer.

Recommendation "Modest"

The board's $22,500 recommendation—which included the price of a low-priced car stricken out by the Commissioners—was modest, it was revealed, compared to what the Prison Industries Reorganization Administration recommended last year following a study of the local parole system. The administration's report said the board's field staff should be doubled.

Due to the large number of conditional release cases, Jelleff said, the board's field officers have to handle 140 to 150 outside cases each. From 50 to 65 is the recognized limit of cases which one parole officer can handle efficiently, he said.

Senator Overton To Head Judges Of Student Essays

Senator John H. Overton, (Democrat), of Louisiana, has been named chairman of judges for the student essay contest in observance of Americanism Week, President Lyle O'Rourke, of the Junior Board of Commerce, announced yesterday.

Prizes will be awarded the best 300-word essay by a Washington high school student and a grade school pupil on "What Americanism Means to Me."

'Unusual Film' Series Will Open Tonight

The final series of the Washington Film Society's unusual motion pictures will open tonight with "The Last Laugh," starring Emil Jannings, at 8:30 p. m. in the Pierce Hall auditorium. A rare Danish production of "Hamlet" will be included tonight.

Luncheon to Mark Temperance Day

A number of luncheons and teas will be given by the District Chapter of the Women's Temperance Union, to mark Temperance Day, Friday, which opens Frances E. Willard Week to be devoted to the solution of social problems arising from use of narcotics.

Church to Offer Play

A three-act comedy, "Big-Hearted Herbert," will be presented tonight at 8:15 o'clock by the Calvary Dramatic Players at Calvary Methodist Church.

House D. C. Committee May Change Days

Chairman Randolph yesterday said he would suggest the weekly meeting day of the House District Committee be changed from Wednesdays because of the frequent conflict with other committee sessions.

Reports on Gallinger Hospital and a bill to halt construction of a motor vehicle testing station in the Southwest, also on the agenda, will be taken up at a meeting at 10 a. m. today.

In Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

JUNIOR SOCIETY STARS: Washington society patted itself on the back last night in Raleigh's Pall Mall room. And with good reason. For a threesome of young society folk, singer Junia Culbertson and dancers Larry Baker and Austine (Bootsie) McDonnell, offered a floor show of professional caliber, polish and entertainment value. It was a triumph of talent plus hard work. "Bootsie" and Larry postponed their first Pall Mall engagement to do extra rehearsing. Junia Culbertson whipped up to Philadelphia for special voice study.

"Bootsie" (lovely in violet and lime-tinted tulle) and Larry gave a beautiful dance ribbing to "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," also scored in the lightly scandalous "Apartment 128" and a modern waltz. Julia Culbertson's finely trained and resonant voice was most effective in the soaring gayety of "Les Filles de Cadiz" and the simple harmonies of "The Man I Love." She wore the gown of bronze lace in which she appeared at the "Junior League Follies."

Pall Mall Special—Larry Hart, saxophonist with Mario di Polo's

Olivette and Dmitri, now appearing in the Shoreham Blue Room

ANGIE RODANTE, who is singing at the Hi Hat

Orchestra, popped off and married a pretty New York redhead on the morning of St. Valentine's Day, was so nervous that he stammered over the "I dos."

LAMBETH-ING is at last getting what has been coming to it. Olivette and Dmitri are clowning the Lambeth wickedly in the Shoreham blue room to the tune of roars of laughter. One look at this pair and you'll recognize all the Lambeth walkers you've ever seen. The difference is that you'll dare to laugh. Gene Archer's barytoning and the funning-around of Hollywood's Mirth and Mack round out a smartly balanced show.

TULIPS BLOOM IN LOTUS: "Holland Carnival," ace revue number, is crowding the Lotus dance floor (big as most theater stages) with a melee of dancing Dutch lads and lasses. Wooden shoes clack merrilly, tulips are flourished, the costumes are a whirl of crisp blues, yellows and pinks set off by white bonnets, puff sleeves and aprons. It rates those circus-y adjectives,—sensational, spectacular, scintillating. Also, it gives succeeding floor show numbers of 1939 a fine high mark to shoot at.

Other current Lotus dazzlers include the "Flower Parade;" "Sweethearts" which features the beauty line and dancers Harris, Baney and Sanders; Singer Dotty Dunn, who's on the saucy side; tango dancers Hammond and O'Freel, and Rod Rodney who dances acrobatically, though he's more than 6 feet tall.

TELEVISION PRINTING? Shar-Zad's Biltmore Boys are beaming like tooth-paste ads. Their pictures are plastered all over the front of the sheet music issue of "Never Felt Better, Never Had Less," with a tag line saying they'd successfully introduced the number at the Carlton. Funny part is that they first played it on the night before they received the complimentary copy. It's supposed to be a miracle. Hm-m-m.

HAIL THE LEGION: The Legionettes have taken Bamboo Gardens this week. These pretties do drum style tap stepping in a militaristic number, then go garden party in a graceful parasol dance. Both polished and original is the waltz to Kreslier's "Caprice" executed by Frances and Carroll. The Todd Sisters dance in the picture style. Magician Carl Lewis does cigarette tricks that positively must leave him singed—somewhere.

GIRLS FROM ALBANY: Marriage of Metronome's Ted Alexander to Albany's Alice Munsell on Monday puts Albany girls as well as the happy pair in the limelight. Four out of the seven members of Paul Kain's Metronome Room orchestra are now married to Albany girls. The orchestra played a season in Albany two years ago. Shouldn't these Albany lasses found a charm college?

PIRATE STEAKS: "Try that steak dinner," recommended Peg-Leg of the Pirates' Den. "How're the steaks?" we inquired of "Rattlesnake" Anderson. "The steaks are awful," he answered, blowing smoke out of his ears. As an afterthought, he added, "But everybody eats 'em." P. S. "Rattlesnake" is a blessed liar. The steak was grand and so were the accompanying potatoes au gratin.

KING COLE CONVERSAZIONE: Jackie Burroughs and Evelyn Knight are both blonde, both sing at the King Cole Room, look like sisters, but Evelyn is about 8 inches taller than tiny Jackie. When Jackie sung after Eve the other night, a bemused customer suddenly looked up, then said to his friend, "Say, what's happened to that girl?" Reply was, "Sa-ay, she certainly has shrunk!"

PIGGY PARTY: Opportunity himself awaits you at the "Piggy Party" to be swung high, wide and pretty at River Bend this evening. For one round little dollar you can eat all of the excellent River Bend food you can hold, drink all the beer you want, dance all evening to the swing of "Red" Pyle's orchestra. Yes, indeedy! It's going to be a great fiesta, and with no strain on the budget! Diets? Fooey!

VETERAN PAPA: Mayfair's carefree fun-maker, Leo Lisee, is getting to be an experienced papa. His redheaded, husky and handsome young scion, Barry, was just one month and one week old yesterday, has been living at home for two weeks and, we're told, is already telling Pops Leo where he gets off.

RADIO FINAGLING: Though England's radio is noncommercial, Jack Kerr (Cafe Caprice) sung for commercial radio while he was in London. He made records for a malted milk concern which were broadcast from the tiny Duchy of Luxembourg on a wave length that covered the British Isles.

WHO'S TOPS? Ray Beck (Uptown cocktail lounge) rates high as a singer, but his pretty wife, who is secretary to FHAdministrator Stewart MacDonald, holds a typewriting championship.

DEPARTMENT OF SURPRISES: Lounge Riviera plans to soon start giving fashion shows in the evening. It's by way of giving a break to the alleged stronger sex who have been enjoying the luncheon fashion shows with their girl friends.

Milton Davis, Rainbow Room maestro, tells us that "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" is an adaptation of an old Jewish folk song.

Angie Rodante (Hi Hat) says that she prefers Washington lads to those of her native Florida. (That's no surprise.)

Al Simmonds (Brown Derby) gets sentimental every time he sniffs grease paint. "The smell of grease paint," he says, "takes me back. It does things to me."

Matt Windsor (Anchor Room) can play the accordion and the piano at the same time and do any number asked. (But he isn't crazyy about it.)

A Reporter at the Papal Court: Visiting the Native Village of Pius XI

Neighbors Still Call Him 'Pope Ratti'

A Learned Scholar At 25, Pontiff Had Humble Beginnings

By Thomas B. Morgan.

Copyright, 1939.

The finality with which Pius XI incorporated the authority of the Apostolic See in his person determined a dynamic and militant rule over the destinies of the Holy Roman Church. "I am the Pope," he might have uttered like a predecessor, "Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church." He had not merely risen to the office, but was the office.

He possessed a store of latent power. His personality was a compound of priest, scholar, athlete, administrator, diplomat, negotiator and leader of men. Every one of these selves was necessary in the Papacy.

To know Pius XI, I visited his birthplace. I visited also the schools he attended, talked with those who went to school with him and examined the records of his scholarship where that was possible. This was to show me how he was tempered, how he acquired the habits, took the turns and was subject to influences which determined his life.

Baptismal Font Still There

It was in a nondescript locality with far less character than the usual Italian village that Achille Ratti was born. Early on May 31, 1857, in this commune of Desio, 10 miles north of Milan in the Brianza region, the humble three-room dwelling of Francesco Ratti was full of excitment. Neighbors came to help, for Teresa, his wife, was expectant. Her child was delivered at 8 o'clock that morning. He was her fourth son, strong and healthy.

The very next day he was carried by his father, accompanied by neighbors and relatives, into the huge church, very huge for such a small village, where he was baptized and given the name of Ambrose Damien Achille. The baptismal font is still there, pointed out by the proud villagers as the scene of his initiation in Christian rite.

Little was the hope that this child, adding to the cares of his father and mother in a poor working-class family, could ever rise above the humble station into which he was born. The Ratti family had been peasants in all its past generations.

Worked in Silk Mill

Francesco Ratti had left the hard, pinching life of the soil to seek, if possible, a better living in the new silk industry which had come to Lombardy and, settling in Desio, obtained work in the Conti mill.

The mill and the living quarters of the workers were in the same two-story rambling stone building on the main street, 50 yards from the big church. The Ratti dwelling of three large rooms was on the second floor. The bedroom in which Achille was born was about 18 feet square, with whitewashed walls, windows opening on the street, a stone floor and ceiling of bare rafters. In an adjoining room stood rows of weaving machines attended by girls who worked while Achille wailed his way into the world.

Today the mill and the Ratti dwelling are much better kept than at the time Achille was born.

The work of Francesco Ratti was the tiring, monotonous toil of tending machines for 12 hours a day, with only enough wages to make it just a little better than peasantry.

Strength Survived

Ambrose Damien Achille spent his infancy in the dinginess of the three-room house. His native physical strength survived all threats of sickness and there was little need for pampering. His first six years were determinative, for many things were happening in Italy and in his native Lombardy. On the day that he was born, Austria ruled Lombardy. His birth was registered by an Austrian official and he was a subject of the Austrian emperor.

When he was able to walk about the village streets, and his uncles and aunts tried to scare him for his inevitable display of individual and oftentmes contrary will—which he possessed in no small measure—they pointed to a policeman, and that policeman was always an Austrian policeman.

He noticed too that the haughty men who paced the streets with the policemen, officials of the Austrian government, spoke a strange and harsh language, so different from the one he spoke at home. It was all enough to imprint in the child mind that there was a distinction and that his people, those who spoke the same language as his mother and father, had something wrong and cruel to bear.

Prayed to Same God

And yet, both Austrians and Italians attended the same church, where he was taught that the good could be found. Amidst their fierce hatred, there they prayed to the same God. Achille had learned to pray, too. He pondered and looked above for peace, peace for everybody. He was told that God could make men good and that it was better for all to be on God's side. This was the beginning of his leaning for the church.

But it was precisely in these early years of his that the great Italian statesman, Camillo Cavour, as prime minister of Victor Emmanuel II, first King of united Italy had decided to drive the Austrian army out of Lombardy. In 1859, the army of the Italian King, with that of Napoleon III invaded the Lombard plain and there, not many miles from Desio, four battles were fought—Magenta, Solferino, Como and Varese.

The cavalry, the infantry and artillery of the Austrians retreated for days through Desio and then came the soldiers of King Victor Emmanuel and Napoleon III to take their places. The hated Austrian policeman was sent away and an Italian carabineer took his place.

Lost Fear of Policeman

Again, Ambrose Damien Achille did not know the reason for it, but he knew that there was great rejoicing in the family and that the whole village had made a grand festa for days. From then on, he was not scared by the Austrian policeman.

The Austrians left Lombardy when Achille was but 2 years of age. The Italians were in control now and the life of the family, the church, the village and the state soon became merged into a harmonious unity. Happiness reigned on the great Lombard plain with its fringe of Alps and its jewel-like lakes.

But the desire to go to the great metropolis to the south did not fascinate Achille as much as the desire to get to the Alps. Their height and grandeur, full of awe and power, filled him with a child's wish to be higher than anything else, able to touch the sky. And this directed a life's ambition. In later years he became a great Alpine climber, and the urge to reach higher and higher forever impelled him to greater conquests of the summits.

His first approach came when his uncle, Don Damien Ratti, took him to Asso, a village on the heights which separate the southern arms of the Lake of Como. Here Don Damien was parish priest. From Asso, the great Lombard panorama could be seen to the south. Near by, at the bottom of the steep slopes on the right and left, were the blue waters of the lake. To the north rose the precipitous heights of the Alpine ranges.

Presented to Archbishop

It would be difficult to find a more beautiful spot.

But a great event occurred on one of his visits to his uncle. The Archbishop of Milan, Mgr. Di Calabiana, was there. Don Damien, with pride in his heart, presented young Achille to the Archbishop. It was a signal honor to be in the same house with such a high churchman.

While in Desio I found Battista Cittario, who knew Achille at this age. Cittario, was 77 when I first saw him in 1923, and 12 years older than Ratti. When I returned to Desio in 1937 Cittario was still living and was in perfect health at the age of 92. He stood up and welcomed me in his humble dwelling with the agility of a man of 50 and invited me to lunch which he was then about to eat. It consisted of carrots, potatoes and cabbage, and gracing the table was a quart of wine. This, he told me, continued to be one of his great indulgences.

"And you know," he recalled, "that when Achille Ratti was last in Desio, he offered me a cup of coffee, which I took.

"Then he remembered something and said, 'But, Battista, I remember thee as a great lover of wine. Thou must have a glass of wine.' I took that, too. He was Cardinal Ratti then, Archbishop of Milan, but he still called me by 'thee and thou,' just as he did when he was a little boy.

In Every Boyish Prank

"I lived right across the street from him. Our windows faced one another and were only four yards apart because the street was narrow. I remember the day he was born because I was twelve then. My aunt was his wet nurse and so that made my cousin a 'milk brother' of Achille. He got to be a strong boy, I tell you he was in every boyish prank. He climbed trees and was always chased away from the orchards because sometimes he damaged the fruit. He did not wear glasses until he went away to school. He always liked to jump. Always climbing, always jumping. In a fight with my cousin, he got a bloody nose. He never forgot that. It took him a year but he gave his milk brother something to remember in a black eye. He could run, too, and was the most surefooted of all the boys. He was good in everything. He often went to church with his mother for she was a very devout woman.

"His father sent him to Don Giuseppe Volontieri, a priest who taught his own little school here for 43 years. Nearly everybody remembered him, and when Achille became a priest he came back to Desio to deliver the funeral address over Don Giuseppe. Young Ratti was with him until he was eight years old and then he was taken by his uncle to Asso.

"Well, it was only a short time after the boy left home to go to Asso that their house burned down.

Mother Died at 80

"Achille came off the best of all his family. His oldest brother was the stationmaster at the village of Rogeno and only lived until he was 53. His second brother was a silk worker in Lyons and died when he was 51. Fermo, the third brother, lived to see Achille made Pope. He stayed at home and helped his father manage the silk mill. The father lived until Achille was made priest. He, too, died young. His mother lived to see him Archbishop of Milan. She was 80 when she died.

"Achille has become a great man especially when you think he was just one of us village boys. Desio is proud of its Pope Ratti."

Desio is very proud of its "Pope Ratti." A huge monument in bronze showing him in his coronation robes and tiara on the pontifical throne, his hand upraised in blessing, occupies the village square. There are schools, hospitals, welfare institutions, playgrounds and orphanages named after him. Naturally, the street on which he was born is called "Via Pius XI."

"Pope Ratti" to Desio

But no one in Desio ever calls him "Pius XI." He is "Pius XI" to all the world but to an inhabitant of Desio he is either "Pope Ratti," "Don Achille Ratti," "Achille Ratti" or "Cardinal Ratti."

When he left to enter the public school at Asso he lived with Don Damien. There a career was to begin, rare in scholastic achievement. From all the records which were available, I discovered that Achille Ratti had a perfect grade through all his school years. There is no record that he ever had a day's sickness.

Don Damien, after consulting Francesco and Teresa Ratti and talking things over with Achille, had decided to send him to the minor seminary school of the Archdiocese of Milan. This was located in the district just a few miles from both Asso and Desio. It was the seminary of St. Peter the Martyr, in the village of Seveso.

Donned First Robes in 1867

It was here on the opening day of school in 1867 that he first put on the ecclesiastical robes of a seminary student. Here he first donned the cassock, and though at this early age no vows were to be taken, the direction which his life was to take was becoming more clearly defined and he was closer than ever before to making the final decision.

And he knew how to wear the cassock. On that same day another boy, who was later to become Cardinal-Archbishop of Palermo entered. Young Alessandro Lualdi, the stranger, had great difficulty in getting into the priestly apparel. Achille came to his assistance. Lualdi never forgot this and recalled it more vividly than ever when Achille was elected Pope.

Those who remember Achille Ratti in the seminary school say that he had a great bent for drawing and would study all the sacred paintings and try to copy them. Whenever his parents asked what kind of present he would like for any given occasion, he generally said he wanted brushes, paints, crayons and drawing paper. He would voluntarily sketch and copy things in his spare time, so that under the rigid discipline of this religious school it became his great recreation.

Showed Great Versatility

The boys there had no organized sports as the institutions in Italy and other countries now have. A group of 20 or 30 of them would be taken once or twice a week for a walk, which was thought sufficient to keep them in ordinarily good physical condition.

From the seminary school of St. Peter's, young Ratti went to the major seminary at Monza. Here he spent three years and here he began to show that great mental versatility which was to be his predominant asset as he stepped higher in his career.

The perfect mark in scholarship followed him all through his courses in Monza. He entered in 1871 and was graduated in 1874. The records of the seminary show that in ten courses he obtained the highest grade possible, during the entire three years.

The scholastic years of 1872-1873 and 1873-1874 show identically the same marks.

Relaxed at Uncle's Home

He continued to spend his vacations with his uncle at Asso. Here was true relaxation from the rigid regulations of seminary life. Everything was so different.

Leaving the seminary school at Monza, Achille Ratti entered the College of St. Charles Borromeo in Milan. Four years were passed here and by this time he was well launched on the ecclesiastical career. The decision was now final.

At the college, the perfect grade was still maintained. In Greek, Prof. Del Grande accorded him the primus cum eminentia. In Hebrew, Prof. Antonio Ceriani, later librarian of the Ambrosian Library, awarded him la prima corona.

His work in the college was so well done as to recommend him to the attention of the archbishop. And so, in September, 1876, after saying good-by to his parents and getting the blessing of his uncle, he left for Rome to undertake his theological training proper.

Church Had Grievous Times

We can, at this time, learn the measure of the religious zeal of Achille Ratti. He came to Rome when the church was passing through very grievous times. It was at just the beginning of the great "quarrel" between the Holy See and Italy. At that very moment, Pius IX was the "prisoner of the Vatican." From the time he was twelve young Ratti had passed through a period of fierce anti-clerical conflict. There were widespread disorders, and a priest walking in the streets might be in danger of his life. No religious processions could be held and those who worshiped, worshiped in silence and solitude.

The states of the church, which extended over the whole of Central Italy, had been taken from the Pontiff. The French had withdrawn their protecting garrison at the outset of the Franco-Prussian War. Thereupon the Italian army had entered Rome on September 20, 1870, and made Rome the capital of Italy, taking it from the sovereignty of the Pope.

Pius XI Closed Doors

In protest, Pius IX retired into the Vatican palaces and closed the doors against the invaders. He had asked the intervention of Catholic powers, but they were busy elsewhere. Added to this, Bismarck, welding the German Empire by "blood and iron," had already defied the church.

The young student was deeply affected by the events which were happening at home and abroad.

He was in Rome on the night of July 13, 1881, when a wild anti-clerical mob took possession of the remains of Pius IX, who died in 1878, and but for the intervention of the police would have thrown them into the Tiber.

His reputation as a student in the preparatory seminaries continued in the Lombard College. Every year new scholastic honors were bestowed upon him, and every year his untiring efforts and deep-rooted sincerity in his chosen profession carried him forward to fit him for the greater tasks ahead.

Won Highest Honors

He completed his three years with the highest scholastic honors, and at the age of 22 was ordained in the Church of San Carlo al Corso, on December 20, 1879.

But this did not terminate his ecclesiastical training. He wanted still further preparation and decided on a post-graduate course in the Gregorian University in Rome.

Here he was able to win the uncommon distinction of obtaining three doctorates at the end of three years. He was granted the decree of doctor of theology, on March 13, 1882; that of doctor of canon law, on June 9, 1882, and finally, that of doctor of philosophy, on June 13, 1882. He was personally congratulated by Pope Leo XIII in a private audience granted him and his old companion Alessandro Lualdi.

At the age of 25 Achille Ratti could by right call himself learned and a scholar.

Cornelia Otis Skinner To Play 'Candida' Here

Noted Diseuse to Be Seen in Stellar Role; Mr. Selznick Still Has His Troubles; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT SHOULD BE one of the theatergoer's happier contemplations that Cornelia Otis Skinner is coming to the National Theater, in due course, in George Bernard Shaw's "Candida."

The appearance of Miss Skinner in the Shaw play will be in the nature of an innovation. Not that the writings of the "great Irish iconoclast" come now as innovations, but rather that Miss Skinner is indulging in a distinct departure from her usual wont in assuming the stellar role in a sustained drama in which she will be surrounded by other players of competence and note. The conventional theater is not an altogether new experience for Cornelia Otis Skinner. Nevertheless, her relinquishment of her habitual custom of presenting only her own una-dramas on the stage of the National will offer a novelty to those who, through the years of her solitary and isolated activities, have come to look upon the daughter of the dean of the American theater as a "one-woman show."

BELL

It will be recalled by the initiate that Miss Skinner began her annual visits to the National Capital in single performances of her unique character sketches. Then the artistry of her combined talents of author, director and solo actress began to manifest itself in such well-wrought conceptions of character mosaics as "The Wives of Henry VIII," "The Empress Eugenie," "The Loves of Charles II" and finally that completely rounded exposition of family decay known by the title of "Mansion on the Hudson." In all of these, Miss Skinner was the sole and supreme exponent of a new theatrical form that made her the preeminent diseuse of the contemporary stage.

Star Fulfills Her Distinguished Father's Wish

All that now, at least for the time being, is relegated to the background while this brilliant actress—and it takes a brilliant actress to impersonate all the characters in a fully proportioned play, single-handed—fulfills her distinguished father's pronouncement of a few years ago that "Cornelia belongs to the theater and should lend her gifts to the furtherance of legitimate drama." That she now is doing.

In her assumption of the stellar role in "Candida," Miss Skinner, of course, is challenging comparisons that should prove neither invidious nor odious. The Shaw play was included in Katharine Cornell's repertoire on a comparatively recent transcontinental tour. It met enormous popular enthusiasm. From the press clippings reposing on my desk it is obvious that Miss Skinner's performance is encountering the same happy reception. And that reminds me. One of Miss Skinner's stocks in trade is the annual publication of a handsome brochure, celebrating her achievements on the stage. There is one out this year, dedicated primarily to "Candida," but not ignoring the peculiarly individualized endeavors that have brought Miss Skinner wide renown in the recent years of her solo enterprises. In scanning this plate-paper example of the more ornate form of dignified exploitation, this department was both surprised and flattered to find itself quoted. This faux pas on the part of Miss Skinner's publicists, I am sure, can be traced directly to the doors of my old friends "Bill" Fields and Francis Robinson, two amiable gentlemen who last were here in the interests of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." Thanks, genuflections and all that sort of thing.

An Author-Publicist-Researcher Pays a Visit

One comes to know, in time, that there never is any telling what West Coast luminary is apt to leap out at you from the dark recesses of an Eastern seaboard theater. Once it was Alice Faye, intent on watching Rudy Vallee struggle with feeble material in a George White "Scandals;" again it was Sam Wood, director of "Stablemates," present in the National to observe the theatrical debut of his daughter, as the ingenue lead in a road production of "You Can't Take It With You." It is, as I say, apt to be anyone.

On Monday night, also at the National, it was Barrett Kiesling, one of the upper-bracket functionaries of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, sitting in on his first view of "What a Life." Mr. Kiesling, after long overland journeys, was tired and thought the comedy, about to be made into a picture by Paramount, not so hot as this column appraised it.

However, Mr. Kiesling had not come to town for the single purpose of viewing "What a Life." What he came here for primarily was to do a little research work on a new screen subject being planned by his company to deal in biographical manner with the life and accomplishments of one of America's inventive geniuses. By some strange quirk of a born publicist's mind, Barrett doesn't want too much said at this time concerning the objectives of his present junket. He left town yesterday afternoon in an apparently complacent mood and promised to be back in April on his "regular round" of mutually helpful contacts with the drama desks of the country. Mr. Kiesling's itinerant portfolio at least enables him to escape the deadly monotony of being continuously static, glued to an anchored desk.

If Barrett Kiesling is not immediately identifiable in the public mind, he may be conveniently "pegged" as the author of "Talking Pictures—How They Are Made; How to Appreciate Them," one of the most informative handbooks on the fabrication of film plays that ever have come off the presses. By the way, whoever it was who borrowed my copy of the book ought to be reminded that it is about time for it to be returned to a bookshelf that could use it as a handy reference work now and again.

The Last Word, to Date, on Those Prize Awards

There was a promise—or was it a threat?—here some days ago to straighten out the matter of those prize-award announcements in the "Movie Quiz Contest,"[2] fostered by the motion picture industry in its "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" campaign, augmented by the further suggestion that "This Is the Movies' Greatest Year." Our announcement of the $50,000 "blowoff" was to the effect that it would occur on February 20. That had no sooner been put in type and printed on paper than the postponement was made to the night of Monday, February 27. That is the final date—so far as we know at the moment. By the time this gets into print it may be Monday, March 6—although I doubt it.

There seems to be "something in the 'Wind,'" It must be a congenital jinx. What I mean is that after some 30 months of backing and filling, pulling and hauling, hemming and hawing and the final selection of a British actress to play the role of Scarlett O'Hara, David O. Selznick still has problems on his hands. After three weeks of preliminary work on "Gone With the Wind," his long-delayed picturization of Margaret Mitchell's monumental best-seller, Mr. Selznick saw his director walk out on him as the result of a "series of disagreements over many of the individual scenes." George Cukor resigned from the post of director of the picture night before last. Heigho, is what Mr. Selznick and I always say. Mr. Cukor may have said something different. I wouldn't know about that.

Picking-an-Easy-One-Out-of-the-Air Note

The inspired title of the play at the National seems to say it all—"What a Life!"

Judy Opens Flower Shop in Hollywood

When Judy Garland Flowers, Inc., swung open its doors on December 17, it was with all of the pomp and glory of a Hollywood premiere or, a super-market.

The shop has been Judy's dream for more than a year. Judy Garland Flowers, Inc., has been embossed in gold leaf on the windows, and Judy is going to plan the displays herself. She plans to devote time each evening to the store, and the rest of the time her mother will preside.

Moran, Moreno Are Back in Pictures

On Paramount's Stage 8, a woman stands behind a counter for a scene of the Gladys Swarthout picture, "Ambush." A man enters, questions her briefly, and goes out.

A visitor whispers to a mailroom boy, assigned to guide him around the lot: "Who are those people?"

"Search me," says the boy. "Just bit players."

The boy may be too young to remember, but both those bit players are former stars. Each is just emerging from retirement for a comeback attempt. The woman is Polly Moran, the man Antonio Moreno.

Ralph Bellamy and Maureen O'Sullivan, as they appear in two of the leading roles in "Let Us Live," the new Columbia production, opening on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater on Friday. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 14.

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Eleanor Holm, who will resume her swimming career at the Music Hall next week, was feted by Hitler during the Berlin Olympics . . . At the tea party tendered for Miss Holm, Hitler became very much interested in the fact that Avery Brundage had fired Eleanor from the Olympic squad for having sipped some champagne . . . Now if you were a member of our team," the Fuehrer assured, "Nothing like this would have happened. We would have allowed you to participate" . . . "And I wouldn't be punished?" asked Eleanor . . . "No," Hitler replied, "you wouldn't be punished—unless, of course, if you lost."

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Sir Hector Bolitho, author of the biographies of the Duke of Windsor and George VI, is visiting America now and came to Tony's, on West Fifty-second street, Friday evening . . . The proprietor introduced Bolitho to cafe life by standing on his head and singing Italian arias at the same time . . . "That's nothing," Bolitho returned, seating himself at the piano, "watch this" . . . The biographer played an operatic tune—striking every fifth note with his nose.

SCHOOL DEPARTMENT: Oscar Levant, who conducts the orchestra at "The American Way," and his brother, Harry, who conducts the orchestra at "The Boys From Syracuse," went to Pittsburgh last weekend to visit their mother . . . Their nephew was brought into the room to play the piano . . . "Grandma, I'm never going to practice any more," the youngster announced. "I don't need to practice, because music runs in the Levant family" . . . "And if you don't practice," Mrs. Levant cautioned, "It'll run right out again."

MOVIES: Groucho Marx isn't very friendly with Harry Cohn, head of Columbia Pictures . . . Groucho went to a Hollywood movie last week, sat through the newsreel and waited for the feature picture to begin . . . The movie started and on the screen was flashed: "Columbia Pictures Presents" . . . Marx turned to his companion and whispered: "Drags, don't you think?"

REVENGE: The costume manager of the Washington Civic Theater—where the new play, "Washington-Merry-Go-Round" was being presented—went to the marshal of the United States Supreme Court to ask for authentic details regarding the costumes worn by Supreme Court guards and messengers . . . The play was written by Leon Pearson, whose brother is one of the Merry-Go-Round columnists and author of "The Nine Old Men" . . . The marshal went inside to consult the Chief Justice . . . A few minutes later he emerged and declared: "We'd be delighted to help you. We'd be delighted to help the Civic Theater . . . But for those men who write the Merry-Go-Round, we can do nothing."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: Teddy Hart, who won his spurs in "Three Men on a Horse," went into Sardi's restaurant, where the news photographers were busying their cameras with Zorina, Walter Abel, Orson Welles and others . . . Hart walked up and down the aisle and then shrugged: "I'm going over to Ralph's. Over there, I'm a bigshot."

LOCAL NEWS: M-G-M has reconsidered and, despite the front-page announcements, its "Good News" radio programs will be continued . . . Maxwell Anderson has applied for membership in ASCAP, because the Weill-Anderson songs in "Knickerbocker Holiday" have become hits . . . Ken magazine will become a weekly, with a Time magazine format, starting April 6 . . . Mrs J. P. McEvoy, whose husband is the coauthor of "Stars in Your Eyes," attended the premiere accompanied by her obstetrician . . . Mae West is heading here, for a personal appearance tour . . . "The American Way," whose setting is Mapleton, Ohio, has a cast of 250—exactly 50 more than the population of the real Mapleton, Ohio.

WAR DEPARTMENT: Keenan Wynn, son of Ed Wynn, is appearing in the new revue, "One for the Money." He portrays the role of Kaiser Wilhelm—in full uniform, complete with three medals . . . The "Kaiser's first medal is a genuine iron cross . . . The second medal bears the inscription, "For Valor in the Great War of Civilization 1914-1918" . . . The third medal is a Star of David.

POLITICS: Lionel Stander attended the dinner given to Commissioner of Fisheries Bell, who resigned. When the orchestra played "Dixie," the guests repeated "Yippee, Yippee" . . . "What's the idea?" Stander asked the man seated next to him—a Missouri Congressman . . . "Well, 'Dixie' is the national anthem," the legislator declared . . . "But the North won the Civil War," the screen star protested . . . "Not as far as Washington is concerned, now," the Congressman explained. "Bankhead of Alabama is the Speaker of the House; Garner of Texas presides over the Senate—and the South rules all the important committees."

Returns for Important Role

JOHN VAN SIKKEN,

popular Washington player, who will return to the Capital from New York to assume the role of Jesus, the Christ, in "The Third Cross," being produced by Paul Messink as a Lenten attraction of unusual interest, under the auspices of the Catholic Players Guild. The James J. Glade play will be presented in the new Holy Name Auditorium, beginning Sunday, March 12

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 14.—Them as has, gits! Which is the case with Sonja Henie. Newton Vincent, of 297 Eighteenth avenue, Newark, N. J., has given Sonja a valuable piece of property in Atlantic City. And simply because he thinks she's tops. She is, too. Sonja's never met the gentleman. It's ocean front and includes a yacht basin. No, he didn't throw in a yacht.

HEDDA HOPPER

When Zasu Pitts heard about this, she said, "Some people have all the luck. The first present I ever had from a fan was a million dollars—in Confederate money."

Bing Crosby's crooning saved the day on "East Side of Heaven" when he stopped 10 months' old Sandy Henville from crying. After the scene was finished, the baby demanded more. It looked like a serious problem until Bing sent for a phonograph and his records which the parents now use instead of a bedtime story.

And I remember the time when Joan Crawford couldn't start the day's work without listening to Bing. I had the dressing room next to her's and was anything but "Sweet and Lovely" one morning after she's played that record 12 times without stopping. But only because I had a roaring toothache.

Gracie Allen says this is the first—and last—time she's going in for murder. She wrote "The Gracie Allen Murder Case" and had to take it when Horace McMann shot off a .45, just missing her foot. She'll be glad to get away from firearms and back to nonsense again.

Virginia Weidler has her first horse and now the studio won't let her ride it.

And speaking of horses—five writers working on Westerns at Republic picketed the office of Sol Siegel until he provided them with new offices. They were next door to the stable. Sol said, "I only put you there so you'd pick up some Western atmosphere."

And while we're on Westerns, Gene Autrey's latest, "Western Jamboree," is the best of the lot. And I'm hoping this one will be shown in Hollywood. It would be a good idea for our sophisticated highbrows to se how Gene does it!

The Warners were frantic the other day and all becaus Jimmy Cagney likes to walk. Seems he hikes 4 miles daily to keep fit. His driver follows him and picks him up. But the driver drove right past him when Jimmy stopped to help an old lady change a flat tire. It was the first time his driver had ever seen him in that position—didn't recognize him.

Now it comes out! Eddie Arnold, plays mostly pompous tycoon types on the screen, always swinging gigantic deals, confessed that he'd never owned a share of stock or a bond in his whole life. His savings go instantly into insurance and annuities.

You can't open a make-up kit anywhere in Hollywood without a Westmore popping out! But the present one is by no means their first feud! All because Wally wants to use the rubber face which Perc perfected on Akim Tamiroff's features in "Magnificent Fraud." Akim plays not one, but four different characters. In my humble opinion, Akim's artist enough not to need any rubber.

Shep Fields' dog got blue ribbons the other day, but he should have taken his cat instead. Seems he has regular visiting hours, but when kept in, stalks up and down and talks like Donald Duck. He's known as "The Tom Boy of Tolucs Lake." Why, I thought that was Erroll Flynn!

Those Lupinos Are Versatile Gypsy Band

Hollywood Beauty Recounts Family History to Reporter; Inherits Musical Talent From Exiled Italian Clan

By Frederick C. Othman.
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Feb. 14.—Ida Lupino probably is America's most fortunate victim of infantile paralysis. The disease left no disfiguring marks on her, but it did keep her flat on her back for months—with nothing whatever to do.

So she stayed in bed and stared at the ceiling. Melodies kept running through her head. This surprised her because she never had been much interested in music; she'd been too busy being a movie comedienne.

When finally she was up and about, she couldn't keep the melodies out of her head. She picked them out with one finger on the piano. She wanted to write them down, but she hardly knew a sharp from a flat. So she took music lessons—and the first thing she knew she was a composer.

So far she has written about 30 songs, including the complete score for an operetta; music publishers are bubbling around her door, and it looks like the Lupino clan, which used to consist of clowns, is about to enter another profession.

Needed New Needle!

The pert, blonde Ida, who married Louis Hayward last fall, played one of her recorded songs on a phonograph today. Andre Kostelanetz' orchestra played it and it sounded fine to us, though Miss Lupino insisted she needed a new phonograph needle.

She and Hayward live in one of the canyons runing through the Hollywood hills and they have a mighty comfortable house. The only trouble is that, as newlyweds, they get to see precious little of each other. Ida has been busy at Columbia Studios since their marriage, while Louis has been starring in the "Duke of West Point" for United Artists. His next is "The Man in the Iron Mask." Ida doesn't know what hers will be, but hopes she'll have some time first to sew on her drapes.

The Lupinos originally were Italians.

"Dukes and things like that, some of them were," Ida said. "But the whole family was banished from Italy 450 years ago and the Lupinos became gypsies. They wandered around Europe for a couple of hundred years. There were many rogues and vagabonds among them.

Settled Down in England

"Eventually the family settled down in England. The Lupinos even then were entertainers. Some were minstrels, some clowns. Others were dancers and every once in a while the Lupinos were rounded up and hung from their thumbs as an example of what Englishmen ought not to be.

"In those days the theater was the least respectable of all the professions. It was a crime to entertain people. But the Lupinos carried on—and they're still at it today. There are literally hundreds of us right now, performing on the stage and in pictures."

Stanley Lupino, her father, is reported to be Great Britain's highest-paid comedian. Lupino Lane and Wallace Lupino are her cousins. Barry Lupino, the singing star, is her uncle. George Lupino, her grandfather, was famous as a dancer and pantomimist. So was his father, before him.

Miss Lupino hasn't a trace of a British accent.

Six Years in Hollywood

Ida has been in Hollywood six years and mostly her life as an actress has been fun. The only unpleasant incident she recalls, outside of her illness, concerned a movie gossip item in one of the local papers.

"I was amazed to read that I had said extras bored me," she said, "and when I got to the studio next day, I found that all the extras were giving me the cold shoulder. I had to go around and apologize to them all—and sincerely, too.

"What had happened was that I had been forced to play in some long and drawn-out extra scenes, which had been added to the picture. I'd remarked that these extras—I meant the extra scenes—bored me and somebody overheard me. I think it's unfortunate that people, not only here but all over the world these days, deliberately go around trying to hurt their fellow-man."

Powell Learns The Man Pays

Dick Powell and Joan Blondell are having a dilemma. They are the possessors of Hollywood's only man-and-wife portable dressing room.

Both stars are working in different pictures and on different stages—and a portable dressing room can't be in two places at once, not even in Hollywood.

The result is that Dick is doing most of his resting by commuting from his stage, where "Always Leave Them Laughing" is being filmed, to the "Broadway Cavalier" set where Joan is working.

The dressing room is the only complete double dressing room on wheels on the lot. It has one door, but otherwise everything is double, including couches, chairs, dressing tables and wardrobe compartment.

House Minority Attacks Salary TaxationAction

Charges Report Holding Amendment Needed Was Suppressed

A confidential report to the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue taxation, declaring a constitutional amendment necessary for reciprocal taxation of Federal and State salaries, yesterday brought a Republican demand for reconsideration of House action last week to effect the reform by statute.

The Republican move, by Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, was ruled out of order by Speaker Bankhead, and the House action will stand. Wolcott charged the confidential report had been "suppressed and concealed" until after the House acted. He declared it "a clear case of impropriety on the part of someone" but said he was "careful not to charge that it was arbitrary action."

Charges Termed Unfair

Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, later took the floor to call the Wolcott charges "unfair." McCormack said the Ways and Means Committee never "as a committee" had copies of the report, and expressed doubt that it would have "changed the minds" of committeemen had they seen the report. He said Wolcott's charges was "an attack on representative government itself."

The report, filed with the joint committee by its staff of tax experts, concluded "that the only way all of the salaries of State and political subdivision officers and employes could be reached by the Federal Government, and all the salaries of Federal officers and employes could be reached by the State governments is by a constitutional amendment."

The President had taken a contrary view, recommending that by ordinary legislation tax exemptions could be removed from both Federal and State salaries and security issues. The House followed the President's recommendation on salary taxation.

Joint Committee Repor'

On the question of whether Congress has the power to impose Federal income ta es directly on Federal and State employes' salaries, the Joint Committee report said:

". . . It is the opinion of this office that in order to effectively reach the compensation of all State and local officers and employes an amendment to the Constitution will prove necessary.

Amendment Held Necessary

On proposed Congressional action to tax directly the interest on State and local securities, the report said:

"It is the opinion of this office that a constitutional amendment is the only effective way by which the Federal income tax can be applied to this interest."

Meanwhile, a Senate Finance subcommittee, holding hearings on proposals to directly tax income from State and local securities, heard Prof. Bernhardt Knollenberg, librarian at Yale, say he believed Republicans were preparing to accuse Democrats of using unconstitutional methods in attempting to tax State salaries and security income directly.

Symphony Fund Totals $51,312

Nearly half of the $111,000 needed by the National Symphony Orchestra for its sustaining fund in the 1939-40 season has already been received in pledges, volunteer workers learned at the first report meeting of the campaign yesterday at the Carlton Hotel.

Most of the $51,312.55 so far received is accounted for by the special gifts committee, after ten days' work.

Remove Fear From Industry Is Plea of A. F. of L.

Labor

ployment. If these are barriers that hold back industry, why not break them down and put it squarely up to industry to absorb the unemployed?"

The council's statement also declared that Government relief was no permanent solution for unemployment, which the A. F. L. set at 10,380,000 in December.

The business declaration completed the council's winter session in which it projected plans for organizing drives with a 4,000,000 membership goal but left the question of C. I. O.-A. F. L. peace unsettled.

The council statement says in part:

"'We are firmly convinced that various forms of Government spending, either in the distribution of relief or in the development and maintenance of work projects designed to supply relief wages to unemployed, can only serve as temporary measures and cannot and do not provide a permanent solution for unemployment.

"The market for the sale of goods and services can be increased and enlarged only through the application of a sound economic policy whereby there is placed in the hands of the masses of the people a buying power which will enable them to buy, use and consume the manufactured goods and services which private industry is prepared to supply.

"This leads to the inevitable conclusion that private industry and business generally should be stimulated so that the facilities of production may be increased and millions more working men and women may be employed.

"What can be done and what should be done, therefore, are the problems which, at the moment, call for consideration and a proper solution. We do not believe that the Nation has reached the maximum in production or consumption of manufactured goods. For that reason we cannot accept the reasoning of those who maintain that we must prepare to maintain constantly an army of unemployed as the wards of the Government. We must turn to private industry for the solution. It should and must serve the Nation. Our national interests require that private industry be accorded the widest opportunity to so. Obviously, the next step must be the establishment of credit and the will and purpose, on the part of the owners of industry to risk, invest, build and construct. The basis for such procedure must be found in the creation of a favorable state of mind. Fear, a lack of confidence and distrust in governmental, social and economic procedure should be removed. A political and economic state of mind should be created which would enable all financiers and the owners and management of industry to face the future with confidence, willing to risk in the expenditure of funds for the development of industrial enterprises and in the manufacture and sale of manufactured products . . .

Some strong, powerful and influential representatives of private industry maintain that in order that private enterprise may go forward it is necessary that the rules and laws under which industry should operate should be more definite, clear and understandable. . . .

"The executive council is firmly of the opinion that this issue should be met squarely. All should understand that no new rules or stipulations will be promulgated by some administrative bureau other than the rules and regulations definitely set forth in regulatory statutes enacted by the Congress of the United States. Such action will serve to help business, labor and the people generally. Under such a plan industrial management would be accorded the widest opportunity to render service in the solution of our unemployment problem."

Cox, Dirksen Put on Offices Committee

Opponents of Last Year's Bill Named By Bankhead

In a major concession to conservative opponents of the President's original reorganization program, Speaker Bankhead yesterday named members unreservedly opposed to last year's measure to two of the three vacancies on the House Reorganization Committee.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking member of the House Rules Committee, and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, both of whom voted to recommit the old bill, were named to the revived committee. One Democrat who voted for the former measure — Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, was added to the group.

The appointments paved the way for action on a drastically modified reorganization bill being drafted by Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, and apparently assured harmonious compromise action.

"I see nothing wrong with the bill now," commented Cox following his appointment. "Nothing controversial has been left in it."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

A. Conti Berenguer presents Puccini's "La Boheme" in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. The cast:

Rudolfo ..... Joseph Bentonelli
Mimi ..... Margarita Salvi
Marcello ..... Francis Row
Musetta ..... Berenice Alarie
Schaunard . William Fletcher Smith
Colline ..... Lloyd Harris
Benoit and Alcindoro
Pompilio Malatesta
Conductor: Angelo Canarutio

With the leading roles capably sung by Joseph Bentonelli, Margarita Salvi, Francis Row and Berenice Alarie, Puccini's "La Boheme" was given an enjoyable performance last evening in Constitution Hall. Despite all the disadvantages of the staging and certain incongruities in the scenic sets, the magic of the music was enough to create the illusion of the past and to carry the auditors back to the Paris of Henry Murger, whose "Scenes de la Vie de Boheme" inspired the composer. Angelo Canarutio conducted with zest and with an evident affection for the score, since he overlooked no finesse in instrumentation.

The charm of "La Boheme," which will probably prove in the long run to be Puccini's masterpiece, resides in its naturalness and spirit of youth. It is a work written from the heart, and while composing it, Puccini was reliving in imagination the days of his poverty and gayety in Milano. The characters are generous and courageous young people, struggling to make a livelihood, dreaming of fame and fortune, always willing to help one another, and flushed into reckless extravagance by the slightest success.

The opera is not a fantasy, legend or an heroic tale, but the fruit of experience, and the music vibrates with youth. Often as one hears it, each performance seems fresh and unfaded. The wayward melodies, the continual rubato, the short and long pauses in movement, the sudden rush of hurried notes after sustained ones produce a feeling of palpitating life. The piquancy of the harmonies have not lost their sting even in this period of atonality.

What Puccini did with harmony in 1895 was then considered the height of audacity; the unabashed consecutive fifths, the hybrid sixths, the double suspensions and the peculiar effects produced by the use of secondary chords. With this boldness he brought exactly the results that he wanted for each situation. The wintry atmosphere at the opening of the third act, for example, has for its simple basis the bare and icy sound of fifths on the flutes and harp above the rigidly frozen pedal point of the tremoli on the violoncellos.

The average auditor, however, is aware of the subtleties in the orchestration, for his ear is charmed by the flow of the melody which has a hidden melancholy even in moments of seemingly spontaneous joyousness. There is an underlying sadness in the lyricism, and the tragedy of the last act is adumbrated in the first.

Joseph Bentonelli was an interesting Rudolfo, a role to which he has evidently given no small study. His impersonation of the character was well thought out and carefully projected in detail. His voice was used in both mellifuous and sonorous tone with equal efficacy. In the contrasting personality of Marcello, Francis Row made an excellent impression. Margarita Salvi was an appealing Mimi in the lyric passages, although her voice sounded a little forced under emotional stress. Berenice Alarie as the vixenish Musetta employed her light soprano voice to good purpose.

'Bumpy Face' Robs Streetcar of $20

Two bandits who have been terrorizing bus and street car operators in recent weeks struck again early yesterday morning when they held up a Capital Transit Co. street car at the loop, Fourteenth and Maine avenue southwest and escaped with about $20.

Leonidas I. Bazemer, 34, of 1329 Belmont street northwest, the operator, identified one of them as the "bumpy faced bandit," who, police say, has been identified in several recent holdups.

Tributes to a GREAT AMERICAN

In selecting April 30, 1939, for opening the New York World's Fair, "The World of Tomorrow" pays homage to a great citizen from the world of yesterday—George Washington. That date marks the 150th anniversary of the First President's first inaugural, at New York.

And by their very existence and daily operation, Chesapeake and Ohio Lines pay homage to the same man as Father of American Transportation. Prophetic, he foresaw the vital need of magnificent transportation to unify the east and west. Practical, he organized the James River Company in 1785 to construct great east-west highways and canals.

Chesapeake and Ohio Lines are proud to be direct descendants of that Company of which George Washington was founder and first president. And, as a part of the Transportation he dreamed of for America, we will continue to carry on in the spirit of service exemplified for all by George Washington.

Systematizing Relief

The special Senate Committee on Unemployment and Relief has done excellent spade work in developing the general outline of a permanent, co-ordinated Federal relief system. But the bill introduced last week by Senator Byrnes, supposedly embodying the main recommendations of the committee, is naturally open to criticism in detail. Furthermore, it lacks the clean-cut precision of the report upon which it is based. A great deal more work of an expert nature is required to whip this important measure into final shape.

The Senate has now recognized this need by adding four new members to the special committee and by giving it jurisdiction over the Byrnes bill. Open hearings will start shortly and an opportunity will thus be afforded for thrashing out such controversial issues as the proposed amendments to the social security act and the fate of the WPA.

The basic virtue of the Byrnes bill lies in its synthesis of well-defined and comprehensive ideas for a permanent policy in dealing with our relief problems. It offers something tangible for experts to discuss, with a view to buttressing the weak points and elucidating the obscure proposals.

Heretofore progress in this field has been blocked by the assumption that relief agencies could be abolished with the passing of a so-called emergency. Senator Byrnes and his committee have performed a public service in recognizing the improbability of this and in setting out to deal with enduring and large-scale unemployment from a realistic approach.

Some Concessions

After six years of a back-breaking effort to achieve self-containment, Germany finds herself as far from the goal as ever. Her dependence on foreign trade shows no signs of diminishing. On the contrary, Hitler himself now admits that the choice facing the Third Reich is to "export or die."

It took the Nazi leaders a long time to come around to realization of this fact. The long succession of striking victories in the field of foreign relations intoxicated them with a sense of power. They assumed and acted on the assumption that Germany can be made invulnerable. They are discovering that this is not the case. Foreign trade is the Achilles heel of German economy. And Germany's foreign trade situation has deteriorated rather than improved as a result of the annexation of Austria and the Sudetenland, and has grown still worse as a consequence of foreign reactions to the November pogroms in the Third Reich.

Last November German exports dropped by no less than 8 per cent. That decline continues. And unless the present passive balance of trade can somehow be reduced the internal repercussions will be serious. It is this circumstance which explains the partial about-face of the Hitler government on the problem of refugees.

For a time the belief obtained in Berlin that the outside world could be intimidated not only into serving as the dumping ground for the penniless victims of the latest Nazi reign of terror but also in compensating the Third Reich for giving up its unwanted "non-Aryan" population. Fortunately, the world refused to be intimidated. The new plan which Mr. George Rublee, the retiring executive director of the Intergovernmental Committee on Refugees, has brought out with him from Berlin does not err on the side of generosity. The Nazi government remains adamant in refusing to permit the refugees to take out more than an infinitesimal proportion of their holdings. But it does make something like an orderly evacuation possible. Jews are at least to be permitted to hold salaried jobs in factories and business establishments while awaiting their turn to leave the country.

Since Germany is short of trained personnel, this latter concession is clearly to the Reich's advantage, as it is also to her advantage not to throw the entire Jewish community on relief. It is also probable that by this gesture in the direction of decency the Nazi leaders hope to curb the very effective boycott movement against German goods.

Whatever their motives, however, the latest action of the German government reveals a dawning appreciation by the Nazi leaders of the Third Reich's dependence on the outside world. The assumption that Germany is invincible is proving as fallacious as the related assumption that the rest of the world is helpless.

If that lesson is learned by Hitler and his colleagues they will be less inclined to be as contemptuous of world public opinion as they have shown themselves hitherto. And the rest of the world, notably the great democracies, will become steadily more immune to the Nazi menace.

A Great American

The universal chorus of tribute now accorded Justice Brandeis provides an interesting contrast with the storm of opposition which sought to block his nomination to the Supreme Court just 23 years ago. In the change may be seen a measure of the development of social thinking in the United States, a development in which the contribution of the retiring jurist has itself been of great significance.

The present universal esteem for Justice Brandeis, however, is not attributable merely to the unmistakable evolution of American thought. Were that the case one might raise the fallacious argument that every appointment criticized at the time of its making would in a quarter-century seem justified. It is not merely the passage of time which has made this great American so revered a figure. It is, far more distinctively, the enduring, unswerving integrity of the man.

In their dissent in the Rosika Schwimmer case, one of the many in which Justices Holmes and Brandeis joined in an opposition far more telling than the majority opinion, is found an excellent summarization of the philosophy characterizing their very similar judicial outlook. "If there is any principle of the Constitution that more imperatively calls for attachment than any other," wrote these great jurists, "it is the principle of free thought—not free thought for those who agree with us but freedom for the thought that we hate."

To this belief, so imperative in a democracy yet so difficult for the average man to practice, Justice Brandeis has throughout his long life been scrupulously true. And his fidelity to the ideals safeguarded by the Bill of Rights in time won the ungrudging admiration of many prone to disagree with his conclusions on specific issues. Often inarticulate, but deep-rooted in the American people, there is a passionate devotion to the characteristics of fairness, impartiality and honesty. And those are principles in behalf of which Justice Brandeis has always been willing to give battle.

"This friend of justice and of men," said President Wilson during the hearings on the Brandeis nomination, "will ornament the high court of which we are all so justly proud." Seldom has a prediction been more wholly validated in the outcome. But the "impartial, impersonal, orderly and constructive mind" which Mr. Wilson admired has, in the upshot, proved much more than an ornament to the court. It has also proved a dynamic force in maintaining this institution as a living, vital, authoritative arm of government.

The scope of the contribution made by Justice Brandeis has amply vindicated the faith of President Wilson. It has also been such as to give singular felicity to President Roosevelt's fine tribute: "The country has needed you through all these years." That tribute is none the less appropriate because the task of finding a successor of comparable stature will be so difficult.

The G. O. P. Takes Stock

In all parts of the country Republicans assembled on Monday to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, the founder of their party. From New York, where former President Herbert Hoover and five newly-elected Republican State Governors held the spotlight, to Los Angeles, where William Allen White addressed a Lincoln Club gathering, speakers reviewed the achievements of their party and offered advice for its future guidance.

As was to have been expected, the rebirth of confidence following the fall elections caused Lincoln Day orators to emphasize the importance of formulating a program as the necessary preliminary to a serious bid for power. Mr. Hoover, however, implied that there is no reason for any departure from the general policies followed by the Republicans prior to 1933. As he pointed out—and it is a fact well worth remembering—most of the great Federal regulatory agencies of today were established prior to the New Deal. The latter represents a speeding up of the pace of governmental regulatory activities in a way which converts an evolutionary trend into an almost revolutionary movement.

Particularly telling was Mr. Hoover's exposure of the financial legerdemain by which the present Administration has tried to persuade the people that deficits are really investments "in prosperity." There is a timely warning in his reminder that "one of the deadly causes of destruction to 20 democracies in 20 years has been government spending and government inflation."

On the whole, for easily understood reasons, Mr. Hoover's address looked backward rather than forward. It was, moreover a politically defensive speech. In that respect it offered a marked contrast to the constructive criticisms hurled at West Coast Republicans by William Allen White.

Mr. White asserted that the G. O. P. "today stands either upon the brink of rebirth or the rim of the grave." The Republicans, he asserted "must be reborn to survive." Like Mr. Hoover, the Emporia publisher recognized the existence of a regulatory trend that necessarily curtails freedom of action. But he lacks Mr. Hoover's rather complacent acceptance of the development, provided only that it occurs under Republican rule.

It is well for the Republican Party to have the counsel of men who view its problems from very different angles. Mr. Hoover emphasizes the value of continuity of policy and insists that there has never been a time in the history of the party when in major questions it was more united. He is a good foil for the more iconoclastic elements who are impressed, perhaps unduly, by the challenge of the new era.

The Lincoln Day speeches have certainly given minority party leaders material for thought. It is to be hoped that out of the multitude of opinions will issue a clear-cut program affording the basis for an effective and discriminating opposition.

Time For Showdown

As the Warring jury-tampering scandal broadens in scope, its implications become more and more serious. It will inevitably be surmised that the shocking evidence presented to Judge Laws does not represent an isolated case of interference with the machinery of justice. On the contrary, the ramifications of the case strengthen previous suspicions that racketeering in Washington has had a paralyzing effect upon some agencies of law enforcement.

Whether or not evidence to justify such suspicions is at hand, it is the duty of officials to follow through on every aspect of the scandal and to let the full weight of the law fall upon those proved to have been involved. Several lines of inquiry ought to be followed. Obviously the procedure of selecting deputy United States marshals ought to be scrutinized. One deputy has been suspended because of testimony to the effect that he had violated regulations. Another has confessed to using his influence with the Warring jury after having received money and liquor from one of the defendants.

In large measure the abuses thus revealed may be traced back to the continued operation of the spoils system in the appointment of marshals and deputies. The marshals are customarily political appointees, and deputies are selected on their recommendations. Under this arrangement time-servers and political henchmen frequently obtain places of trust that should properly be filled only by men of the highest integrity.

One definite move growing out of this scandal, therefore, should be extension of the civil service system to United States marshals and their deputies. With spoilsmen frequently appointed to these posts, it is perhaps surprising that jury tampering is as rare as it is believed to be.

A still greater responsibility rests upon the District authorities in charge of law enforcement. The charge that protection money had been paid to Washington police was not substantiated at the first Warring trial. Now bribery is known to have been employed by Emmitt Warring in his effort to escape conviction. Yesterday's testimony shows that even before the second trial began a prospective juror was approached. That disclosure, together with the admitted bribery of Deputy Marshal Upperman, places added emphasis on the protection payments allegedly made to local police by the chief of the numbers racket.

Commissioner Hazen ordered an investigation of these charges at the time they were made. Investigators sat through the first trial but apparently obtained no specific clews. Logic would indicate that not much can be expected of a police investigation of police. If the community hopes to cope with the numbers racket, and its slimy trail of corruption, the Board of Commissioners will have to inaugurate a more effective probe and keep it going until the suspicions of an aroused community have been cleared away.

Hot Stuff

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Fire broke out at the Star Theater in St. Louis a few weeks ago and did $3,500 damage. This provoked more than the usual notice because the film shown that night was entitled "Too Hot to Handle." Now an alarming coincidence has been recorded. Another movie theater has suffered a fire, this time at Marion, Ind., and with a loss of $100,000. This time the blaze started while the show was in progress, and again the film was "Too Hot to Handle."

Press-agent stunts rarely go quite as far as this, so the cause of the twin conflagrations must be sought elsewhere. Theorists doubtless will make the most of the fact that the picture's stars are the incandescent Myrna Loy and the torrid Clark Gable. They will also note that the film features the burning of a world-flight plane and of a munitions ship at sea, the destruction of a Chinese city and an assortment of other spectacular disasters. Whatever is responsible, the producers will have to begin issuing a fire insurance policy to every exhibitor if the combustion continues.

The Hit-Run Driver

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While he was taking part in the Arlington County Safety Council's "Safety Clinic of the Air" on Saturday evening, Howard Wentworth, without warning, asked me what I thought should be done about "hit and run" drivers. To try to answer that one without warning is just too much.

There is a way to catch most of these hit and run drivers, including the one who bangs a fender at the curb and forgets to leave his card in the parked car he has damaged.

Whenever a car is involved in the customary "hit and run" accident there is generally considerable damage done to the front of the escape car. It is very unusual for an individual to be able to personally iron out the dents in a car body or fender, most of this work goes to a garage. Now if the garages were under the same rigid supervision as the secondhand dealers, required to report every car that comes to them with any evidence of collision, the police would be able to check closely on every car that has been in a crash.

Any police officer seeing an auto on the street that has been in a crash could hold the driver until he checked to see if the accident had been properly reported. Under present laws all traffic accidents except the most trivial must be reported to police. This procedure would be most embarrasing to anyone who has been in an accident but at least it would force them, by the inconvenience of being detained by police so often, to have the car repaired and checked to see if there is more damage than the external scars.

By requiring every independent garageman or back-alley mechanic to be licensed along with the large commercial repair shops the above suggestion could be enforced. The purpose of the license would be one of control rather than revenue. The license could be issued for about the price of a driver's license or less. By this means of control the police would have the added advantage of being in a better position to check the places where cars are looted.

This is a revolutionary suggestion. In fact it may well be classed as a "half baked, crazy idea," but that is the type of driver the plan would trap. There is no part of the suggestion that cannot become a part of the law and if the Congress will give the District a good law, other States will watch it's operation closely and the organized law enforcement and safety organizations of the country will demand it's universal adoption.

Congress is in a mood to act. The child of a Representative has been killed, the grand-daughter of a Senator has been run down and seriously injured by a driver, who however was man enough to make no attempt to escape.

This plan can be worked out, and I can think of no better promoter of the plan before the Congressional committee than The Post and their capable Howard Wentworth.

Wants Pedestrian Lights

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What inscrutable reasons have our lawmakers for refusing a "pedestrian light" of 30 seconds' duration to those of us that are compelled to navigate on foot?

Under existent and proposed traffic law it is utterly impossible for aged people (or for the young, for that matter) to cross our crowded thoroughfares with any degree of safety. Irresponsible and reckless motor drivers will continue to swoop around the corners, utterly oblivious to the rights of pedestrians, thereby creating a hazard which will remain until stern measures are adopted to afford some definite protection.

A brief light for the people at dangerous intersections would certainly mitigate the perils now in evidence. Until said signal is installed, the long-suffering pedestrian will continue to dodge dangerously driven cars, despite proposed regulation, and in ever-increasing number fall prey to these modern juggernauts.

From Old Virginia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We Virginians diligently read The Post—a privilege, indeed. The able editorials, Mark Sullivan — dead right in most of his opinions; Dorothy Thompson, princess of journalism; Pegler comes along with his wistaria complex—able and fluent; Walter Lippmann; funnyman Phillips, and so on and on to the daily letters to the editor. Now some of these fulminations in the form of letters interest me profoundly—and otherwise.

We have one individual to whom the President is a "dazzling personality;" another who says it's all poppycock; another who declares the WPA pay envelope contains "only" $61 monthly, which, in his opinion, is virtual starvation wages. (I, as an apprentice, got less than that per annum; but in those remote days we were taught economy and efficiency.) Another letter in which the writer deplores the regrettable attitude of those two stalwart Senators from Virginia who dare to oppose the wish and will of the President in his choice and selection of a Federal judge. Also Mr. Amlie, with visions of a dictatorship in another ten years, gets a "once over"—pro and con, and so on and on.

In my own humble opinion, Virginia has two very able Senators, most worthy and faithful to a public trust and as considerate of their constituents' welfare as any of the Senators who grace the halls of the United States Senate.

We Virginians regard with much pride and great admiration the course our distinguished Senators have pursued as regards frank and determined opposition to all governmental waste and extravagance—"planned economy" and pig mortality—so to speak.

Virginia has mothered some great and distinguished sons, and could old Virginia be more honorably, efficiently and faithfully represented in the United States Senate than by the present two distinguished gentlemen, Carter Glass and Harry Flood Byrd? H. MORRISON, JR.

New Traffic Rules

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With the promulgation of the new traffic regulations for Washington, may I emphasize the fact, apparently often overlooked, that the proposed regulations are not for pedestrian control alone but apply equally to pedestrians, equestrians, and drivers of vehicles. Furthermore that they confirm the old rule that pedestrians are entitled to the right of way at street intersections. It is earnestly to be hoped that the impartial application of the regulation to all classes of users of the streets will materially improve the present deplorable situation.

Tale of Two Carpenters

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A correspondent in a recent issue ribbed you for suggesting relief payments should be cut and WPA reduced; asks how a family of four can live on $61, and where your humanitarianism has evaporated. I'd like to line up on your side of the weeping willow. Unless this problem of Government waste is attacked here and now, even the brief upward splurge we're witnessing will dry up. We'll be sunk in a deeper hole than ever. It's cheering to see Congress fully awake to this danger.

I know some nonreliefers who are making out quite well on less than $61—not by the highest American standards of which the political golden voices prate; but realizing the present as an emergency that will diminish if handled right, they are fighting, making out.

Yes, $61 is enough if ground out of the taxpayer till business suppression results by a crew of political promisers who plugged "top-heavy wages and prosperity" instead of widespread re-employment at living wages.

I hired much labor in the boom 20s. Following up cases affords a liberal education. Take Bill Hacksaw, with three kids, small insurance policy and $2,000 cash when the depression hit. Facing his problem, he moved to the edge of town, practically the same conveniences, at half the price, $22 a month on the $4,000 house—boom price, $6,500—that he bought. Fresh air and acre to grow stuff on. His kids are lusty savages. Then Bill got bunged by a hit-run driver. Relatives offered him $1,000 on loan at $40 a month till he could work again. Oh, yes; Bill could have lived in princely style on $55 relief and never had to think of paying it back. That's why I'm hiring Bill as a carpenter at $8 a day—and, incidentally, working nonunion for the first time in 20 years.

In contrast is Bill's former partner, Phil Clawhammer. With equal chance, Phil never saved more than to tide him over a short winter. On relief as to the manner born. Family, relatives, friends a unit in agreeing it'd take a derrick to stir Phil's lethargy. Even sold his tools. When Bill and I went to see old Phil he dripped complaints about the inadequacy of relief and some "common man" hooey imbibed over the radio. Though complaining "they ain't no jobs," he didn't once ask me about a job; seemed in deadly fear that one might be offered.

Old-Age Pensions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While the present social security act is better than nothing, it is inadequate, very expensive to operate, and gives security to only part of the people. That all men should have equal rights is the very foundation of our Government, and to discriminate against some groups seems unjust and un-American. Also the overhead expense to maintain thousands of clerks, 48 State systems and 3,070 county systems is stupendous—in order to administer old-age pensions which in one State runs as low as $4.20 per month!

Dr. Gallup's poll shows that an overwhelming majority of citizens are in favor of a reasonable old-age pension. The general welfare bill, H. R. 11, meets this need with a minimum pension of $30 per month and maximum of $60 to all unemployed at 60. Financing is painless in that people are taxed only in proportion to their ability to pay and the poor (income less than $100) are entirely exempt. Certainly this seems to embody the American spirit of equal benefits to all.

The Cows Come Home Again

I DON'T BELIEVE much in sequels, but it seems that the cow needs another stripping, all as a result of a few reminiscences pertaining to that revered mammal that appeared in this column on January 20. A feminine reader said to me, "Why don't you leave the poor cow alone? Why spread this halo over her humble head?"

Evidently I had stirred up some girlhood memories that were quite content to lie dormant. I suspected they had something to do with milking. Said I, "I suppose this halo has come to us from the Egyptians. The cow, you know, was sacred to Isis, the Egyptian goddess of fecundity. She was even represented as cow-headed."

"Hmmmmm," was the answer.

A more sympathetic fan, however, sent me a fine kodak picture of a healthy Holstein which I shall cherish. I don't remember ever seeing before a snapshot of a cow qua cow. There's a great deal to be said for the idea.

Another girl told me how her family cow, unlike mine, had not objected to being ridden and how as a child she was able to mount the beast by first climbing a tree. One of her most vivid bovine recollections was sometimes being sent after the cows early on cool frosty mornings and warming her bare feet on the spots on the ground where the animals had lain. She had also the common, though none the less exasperating, experience of spending hours on the track of the errant herd, and returning weary and defeated to the barnyard only to find them huddled in the shed where they had been switching flies all afternoon.

Other responses came . . . everybody, it seemed, had once kept a cow. Cows were even praised for their educational influence. But one of the most interesting letters came from Capitol Hill, from one who signs himself "Homemericus."

"My first great lesson in life's battle," says Homemericus, "was learned when my big brother said to me, 'Come on, kid, you're old enough to milk, and it's the slickest job you ever tackled.' Instantly I swelled up with pride like a poisoned pup, intensely eager as I was to arrive at the full stature of a man. Unconsciously I followed my culprit brother to the barn and took my first lesson in the art of milking. The first thing to do, he said, 'is just to pat old Spot on the back and ask her to h'ist. Then get on the three-legged milk-stool and proceed to pull on the faucets.' At first it was difficult to keep two streams going at the same time and keep them hitting on the inside of the old cedar milk bucket. 'You're doing fine, kid,' my brother remarked in an encouraging tone. 'Any fellow who is smart enough to pat his head and rub his stomach at the same time can do this little trick.'

"Well, after about three lessons I was able to milk and bring in the strippings. But it was not long until I discovered my grand illusion. I had been brutally victimized, and from that time on the milking chore was mine, while that big lobster brother of mine was off playing town ball with the other boys or fashioning a home-made wagon. And the sad thing about it all was that I had no smaller brother coming on to instruct in the gentle art of milking. I tried to work it on my sister, but she was threatened with a beau and thought milking entirely beneath her dignity, and in the family argument Ma sided with Sis.

"But after all," Homemericus concludes, "that lesson was worth all it cost in human agony and suffering. I resolved then and there never again to become the victim of flattery and chicanery. Since then I have been immune from all gold-brick artists, and the memory has enabled me to escape many of the usual pitfalls of life."

For a real tribute to the cow, Homemericus tells me I should seek out and read the eulogy by Col. Woods, "the great livestock auctioneer of all time who lived at Lincoln, Nebr." He says it deserves to rank with Bryan's "Cross of Gold" speech as a classic, but so far I have been unable to familiarize myself with this recommended panegyric. Other "Boviniana" have been called to my attention—enough, almost, to fill a book—but one of the most heart-rending is James Whitcomb Riley's "Lines on Hearing a Cow Bawl, in a Deep Fit of Dejection, on the Evening of July 3, A. D. 18—" which deserves one more (and that's all) reprinting:

Portentous sound! mysteriously vast
And awful in the grandeur of refrain
That lifts the listener's hair, as it swells past,
And pours in turbid currents down the lane.

The small boy at the woodpile, in a dream
Slow trails the meat-rind o'er the listless saw;
The chickens roosting o'er him on the beam
Uplift their drowsy heads with cootered awe.

The "Gung-olgh" of the pump is strangely stilled;
The smokehouse door bangs once emphatic'ly,
Then bangs no more, but leaves the silence filled
With one lorn plaint's despotic minstrelsy.

Yet I would join thy sorrowing madrigal,
Most melancholy cow, and sing of thee
Full-hearted through the tears, for, after all
'Tis very kine of you to sing to me.

Communists' Code

WE HAVE HEARD much about the relation between our press and the public and our press and the advertiser. Some of the top-loftiest scorn has been sounded by the Communist and their fellow-traveling stool-pigeons, or undercover men. The charge runs that our press is the corporate press, that it doesn't give opposing opinion a square rattle and that it helps exploiters to rob the people.

In a recent incident, of which a minor scandal was made in the radical press, a New York paper was accused of editing an advertisement for a book. The paper answered that the ad was edited to eliminate libel for which the publisher could have been held finally responsible.

Well, what about the Communist press? How does the Daily Worker, the Communist organ in New York, observe the code which the Communists and their fellow-travelers lay down for others?

First, the Daily Worker is a corporation itself. It is incorporated for the same legal reasons that the United States Steel is incorporated. It recently was haled into court for failure to comply with the State law requiring publication of the names of the responsible officers of newspapers and, under this compulsion, complied.

Would-Be Suers Given Run-Around

THE STATE ATTORNEY general's office complained that persons who wanted to sue the paper could not find anyone who would admit that he was qualified to receive notice of a suit. They got the old runaround. Everybody in the plant, believe it or not, was just waiting for a street car.

But you ain't heard nothing yet.

Not long ago the Atlantic & Pacific stores, the great grocery chain, placed a big ad in a great many daily papers, presenting its argument against the Patman bill which intended to abolish chain stores by taxing them to death.

A representative of the Daily Worker's advertising department called at the office of Carl Byoir, the professional propagandist, who ran the publicity program, and asked that the Daily Worker be given the ad. The Byoir office agreed and directed Paris & Peart, the advertising agents, to send the copy down to the Daily Worker.

Paris & Peart then received a letter signed by Nat Wein, on Worker stationery, inclosing an editorial which had been published by the Worker denouncing the A. & P., and refusing to accept the ad on the ground that "it would be a breach of propriety to be remunerated for publishing something which is contrary to the views expressed in the editorial page."

Regular Advertising More Than Welcome

ATLANTIC & PACIFIC couldn't even buy space in this liberal organ to present the other side of the story. The same principle rigidly governs the Communist writers who have been heard to allege with contempt that commentators in the free press take orders from the boss.

But you still ain't heard nothing about the Daily Worker's editorial-advertising policy.

"We assure you," Mr. Wein wrote Paris & Peart, "that we are always more than happy to insert the regular advertising of the A. & P., because we are convinced that we can thereby render the A. & P. unusual service in the way of accelerating the sales of their products and developing an increased number of satisfied and permanent customers."

Now, mark that preceding paragraph and cast your eye back over it as you read the following quotations and indirect quotes from the Worker's editorial on the A. & P., which is slugged "The Fight to Protect the Corner Grocery Man."

An Offer to Help 'Ruthless Monopoly'

THE EDITORIAL says the A. & P picks the pockets of the public every day, and "dares to speak as a friend of the farmers it cheats and bulldozes year in and year out."

"The big chains use their tremendous power to cut prices only as long as they are fighting to crush this or that small merchant," it says. "When he is crushed or absorbed prices go up again."

There is much more to it—charges of monopolist thievery, robbery of the consumer, independent merchant and farmer alike and, finally, an exhortation to protect them by legislation which would drive this vicious exploiter out of business.

Now go back and read again of the happiness it gives the Communist newspaper to accelerate sales for this ruthless monopoly and "develop an increased number of satisfied" but, obviously, victimized and betrayed customers among the readers of the Daily Worker.

A New Government For D. C.

By Merlo J. Pusey

The first question to be asked regarding the Griffenhagen report is whether it lays down a framework for a genuine local government in Washington.

Primarily, of course, the Griffenhagen study was designed to enhance the administrative efficiency of the local government, with economy as a direct product of that reform. This aim will be readily appreciated by a voteless community which is paying too high a price for inadequate service. But in recent years Washington has come to regard itself more and more as a separate entity. Even the most efficient type of community service rendered by a government over which civic groups could exercise no measure of control would be found unsatisfactory.

ONE REASON why previous efforts to consolidate scattered and disorganized units of local Government have failed has been the fear of some groups that popular control over several independent agencies would be lost. Already protests against the Griffenhagen plan have been raised on that same basis. The District has had enough of bureaucratic rule. Its experience as an incompetent ward of the Federal Government has been far from happy. Any practical reorganization plan, therefore, must recognize the demand for a city administration that is primarily local in character and outlook.

To what extent does the Griffenhagen report provide such a formula? There has been some complaint that it would abolish the Board of Commissioners, the Board of Education, the Board of Library Trustees and other agencies that, in large degree, reflect the views of local citizen groups. To weaken these independent boards while the local government remains unco-ordinated and impotent would be inexcusable. But no such proposal has been made. The Griffenhagen plan would create an entirely new system.

THE IMPORTANT consideration is not so much what the Griffenhagen plan would supplant, but rather what it would create. The Board of Commissioners as now constituted would disappear. With it would go some commendable features of the commission form of government. In its place, however, would rise a more powerful local governing body, which could be made far more representative of the community than is the present commission. It is this positive aspect of the Griffenhagen plan which needs emphasis.

During recent years the Commissioners have shown themselves to be amenable to community views in many respects. But even when they have been guided entirely by local opinion their efforts have often been frustrated because of the extremely limited powers they may exercise. The proposed new governing body would have all the powers customarily granted to municipal corporations. It would not only speak for the District; it would also be able to act for the District.

MOREOVER, its membership would probably be more representative of the local community than is that of the Board of Commissioners. One of the three Commissioners is an Army officer. While the present Engineer Commissioner and his predecessors have rendered excellent service to Washington, they can scarcely be said to represent the community. As the Griffenhagen experts suggest, an Army engineer would be more advantageously placed at the head of the proposed local department of public works.

While the other two Commissioners must be local residents, these posts have often been used as rewards for politicians with little knowledge of or interest in Washington as a community. That is not strange, for the District has been usually regarded as just another branch of the Federal Government. With the creation of a real governing body for the sole benefit of the District, the emphasis might well be changed.

ENLARGEMENT of the governing body, as pointed out by the report, would have the immediate effect of making it more representative. Two civilian members can not possibly reflect the viewpoints of all the substantial groups in a city of more than 600,000 inhabitants. Patently, then, the local government visualized by Mr. Griffenhagen would be more responsible to the community than that now operating.

Franchise Question Not Touched Upon

IN DISCUSSING the proposed new governing body, the report leaves no doubt that its members would be chosen to represent the people who live here. The question as to how the governing body should be selected was not raised in the Griffenhagen study. The setup it has proposed would be equally feasible with an appointive or elective city council. But in either event, the legislative power would be granted to a body of local citizens. That is implicit in the following quotation from the report:

Under the present policy, the President would appoint the members of the commission, and it would be difficult in a commission of only three to give adequate recognition to the various points of view in the community. In a legislative body as many points of view as practicable should be brought to bear.

It will be a simple matter to insure the local character of this legislative body in the proposed charter for the District.

NOW THE question arises as to whether anything would be lost by placing the school and library systems, the Board of Public Welfare and other agencies now operating with complete or partial independence under the proposed unified municipal government.

Ultimate control over the schools would be exercised by a body of local citizens chosen to represent the community viewpoint. That would not be much of a departure from the present arrangement under which full control is lodged in a board of citizens appointed by District court judges. But in practice, school policy would be formulated by a special advisory committee on education chosen on the basis of interest and experience in the educational field.

It may be that the Griffenhagen investigators have gone too far in recommending that all municipal agencies be grouped into 17 administrative departments. For example, the Alley Dwelling Authority, which has a specialized task of its own to perform, would be rather unceremoniously dumped into the proposed department of public works.

As a matter of fact, the ADA has a closer relationship to public welfare than to public works. Its activities must also be co-ordinated with those of the playground and educational authorities. Its importance and distinctive character should at least give it the status of a separate department or agency. Yet the plan of co-ordinating its organization with that of a centralized municipal government is basically sound.

NO DOUBT other modifications in the departmentalized setup recommended by the report will be found desirable. After all the experts have provided only a general outline of the local government they would like to see installed here.

In any event, it is the community viewpoint that should prevail. Washington urgently needs a centralized local government which can manage its own affairs without having to rely upon the slow-moving machinery of Congress. Precisely that sort of regime will be created if Congress has the statesmanship to approve the simple, clear-cut plan awaiting action before the House District Committee.

Great American

By Ernest K. Lindley

Mr. Justice Brandeis

AS ONE of the incontestably great Americans of his time retires from the Supreme Court, it is encouraging to recall that he was once anathema to many who now acclaim him.

At the outset of his first administration, President Wilson wanted to make Louis Dembitz Brandeis a member of his Cabinet, but did not dare to send his name to the Senate. When, in 1916, he nominated Mr. Brandeis to the Supreme Court, the uproar from the "right-thinking" people of the country was terrific. The fight over his confirmation was long and bitter beyond any that has occurred over a nomination by President Roosevelt. Mr. Brandeis was denounced as a dangerous radical and a person unfit to serve on the highest court. Every living former president of the American Bar Association, including William Howard Taft, Mr. Wilson's immediate predecessor in the White House, openly opposed his confirmation.

Such were the enmities that Louis Dembitz Brandeis had earned as an uncompromising crusader for the people's rights against the massed power of predatory finance.

Never Faltered As a Liberalist

THE PROMISING liberal movement of a generation ago was soon misdirected into the futile, costly effort to save democracy at home by fighting a war on the continent of Europe. That tragic diversion wrecked Woodrow Wilson and all that he stood for, and ushered in a period of corruption and smug reaction which brought the Nation close to ruin.

During that period, Justice Brandeis never faltered. Secure in his seat on the highest bench, he flew the flag of liberalism when it had been shot down almost everywhere else. His dissents, with the late Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, helped to keep alive, during the black decade, some of the most inspiring fundamentals of the American tradition.

His intellectual probity and moral force won the deep respect of those who could not always agree with him. Mr. Taft apologized for his error in opposing Mr. Brandeis' appointment to the Supreme Court, and when Mr. Taft became Chief Justice of the United States, the two men became warm friends.

In the darkest days of 1932, Justice Brandeis heralded the period of social and economic experiment known as the New Deal in his great dissent in New State Ice Co. vs. Liebman (in which Justice Stone concurred.) In that opinion he said:

"THE DISCOVERIES in physical science, the triumphs in invention, attest the value of the process of trial and error. In large measure, these advances have been due to experimentation . . . Some people assert that our present plight is due, in part, to the limitations set by courts upon experimentation in the fields of social and economic science; and to the discouragement to which proposals for betterment there have been subjected otherwise. There must be power in the States and the Nation to remold, through experimentation, our economic practices and institutions to meet changing social and economic needs.

"To stay experimentation in things social and economic is a grave responsibility. Denial of the right to experiment may be fraught with serious consequences to the Nation . . .

"If we would guide by the light of reason, we must let our minds be bold."

Almost five years elapsed before the Supreme Court heeded Justice Brandeis' warning. It did so only after Mr. Roosevelt's decisive victory in 1936 and under the threat that its membership would be enlarged. During those years, new laws had been enacted aiming at many of the reforms Justice Brandeis had sought a generation earlier. Among the new laws were also some he did not like.

Pioneer Supporter Of Small Business

IN HIS ECONOMICS he has tended toward a rather extreme view of the superiorities of the small business unit. This view has colored the thinking of many New Dealers but it is no longer one on which progressives can unite, and to many of them it has come to seem somewhat antique.

Many of his writings of years past retain all their freshness, however. His 1914 book, "Other People's Money," based upon the Pujo "money trust" investigation, might as well have been written in 1933 and 1934 on the basis of the Pecora investigation. Most of his criticisms of industrial insurance—or wage earners' life insurance—written in 1906, probably will be written again in a few months when the current monopoly investigation has completed its study of life insurance. What he said for minimum wage laws from 1907 through 1914 had to be said all over by others thousands of times until, in 1937, the United States Supreme Court decided that it had been abysmally wrong for many years, and did a flip-flop.

On the broad front, Justice Brandeis' battle can never be entirely won. But on the Supreme Court his victory has been clear-cut. The liberal principles for which he stood as a dissenter have at last become the constitutional doctrine of the majority. And now his close friend and most distinguished disciple, Felix Frankfurter, has become a member of the highest court.

The daily grind of court work had begun to tax his energy. But when he returned to the bench last week after an illness, he demonstrated that at 82 his mind and spirit were unimpaired. Thus he remains an elder statesman whose views will be eagerly sought, informally at least, as long as his strength holds—which, one hopes, will be for many years.

"It was a very satisfactory, very harmonious, and I think a very helpful meeting," said House Democratic Leader Sam Rayburn. "I saw nothing disturbing in it."

But House Republican Leader Joe Martin, whose compact Republican minority has wrung several victories from the Administration by combining with bolting House Democrats, said the majority "has the jitters."

"Of course, they want to get together, but they can't do it," said Martin. "They have too many fundamental differences."

Highlight of the conference was an analysis of the 1938 elections by Representative Patrick H. Drewry, of Virginia, chairman of the Congressional Democratic Campaign Committee, and a reliable prophet on past contests.

Drewry listed the President's Supreme Court plan, the Government reorganization bill fight of last session, and resentment over the President's "purge" efforts in the last party primaries as three contributing factors toward Democratic reverses in the November elections.

The Virginia Democrat suggested that none of the three need figure in the next campaign, but stressed the need for co-operation if Democrats are to hold their own next November.

Like Speaker Bankhead, who sounded the closing leadership appeal for "party solidarity," Drewry was reported to have warned against a defeatist attitude by Democratic Congressmen, and to have insisted that Democratic prospects in 1940 are still "very good."

At least two Democrats—one a right-wing conservative and the other an ardent New Dealer—emphasized the need for more White House co-operation with Congress, while two members of the so-called Democratic bloc declared it is Congress that needs to co-operate.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking conservative member of the House Rules Committee, was quoted as saying the President should more freely advise with members of Congress—that he ought to call them more frequently to the White House and consult with them more. Only thus, Cox was reported to have said, can the President win the Congressional co-operation he seeks.

Cox said there was need for the President to go along with Congress, rather than Congress going along.

A surprise speech in the same tenor came from Representative Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee and a loyal Administration supporter.

Randolph said there must be closer relations between the legislative and executive branches, and the House isn't altogether to blame for the present lack of it. Randolph recalled that the day after Congress passed the $725,000,000 deficiency relief bill, the President sent back a message demanding the $150,000,000 that had been cut from it. The West Virginian suggested this was not conducive to improved relations.

Pleas for loyal Democratic support of the President came from Representative Michael J. Bradley, of Pennsylvania, and Representative John A. Martin, of Colorado, the two liberal bloc members. Bradley reportedly told members the country thinks there are three parties—New Deal Democrats, Democratic conservatives and Republicans.

The party conference, said to have had its root springs from the membership rather than from the leadership and the President, was called by Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Democratic caucus.

Majority Leader Rayburn was said to have admonished Democrats of the necessity of remaining in Washington and on the floor in order to make every Democratic vote count. While Republicans recently have remained constantly at the call of their leaders, Democrats, accustomed to the overwhelming majorities of past sessions, have been proportionately lax in attendance.

House Majority Whip Pat Boland, whose whip organization is responsible for turning out the Democratic vote, stressed the need of co-operation with his group if the majority is to function smoothly.

Speaker Bankhead emphasized party solidarity and the need for unit functioning of the majority.

A "stand by the President" appeal was made by Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the Rules Committee.

While most Democrats present agreed that no bitterness marred the conference and that the "air was cleared" by a frank exchange of views, some expressed doubt that the upshot will be future harmony.

The Once Over

Murals for the New York Subway

Mural paintings in the stations of the city-owned subways of New York have been voted and it will now be possible to go to a subway to look at the pictures.

Watch for the headline, "Accident in Subway. Two Loads of Art Critics Collide."

"Spirit of Rapid Transit"

In the center an enormous painting of a shipment of chickens being transported through the streets of New York, packed 200 to the crate, on a sweltering summer day. The hens are panting, bleary-eyed and semi-conscious. At the left is a figure representing a typical New York subway patron. He regards the suffering chickens with a look of great pity and wears an expression which seems to say, "Such cruelty shouldn't be tolerated. At the right is an elderly lady getting up and giving a high-school boy her seat.

"This Door Not Working"

This scene shows a fat man with a very dumb look standing in the doorway of a train, reading a paper upside down. There are two other main figures, one representing Futility or a Fellow Trying to Get Out. The other represents Despair or a Fellow Trying to Get Aboard. A fresco shows numerous small figures depicting stupidity, selfishness, stubbornness and the more defenseless characteristics.

"The Gold Rush"

An enormous turnstile occupies most of the scene. Clustered about it and working feverishly with jimmies, keys, wrenches, suction pumps and vacuum cleaners are members of the City-Owned Subway Self-Help Association or Society for the Redistribution of Loose Change. In the background is a subway attendant carrying a banner which reads, "Share the Nickels."

"The Lady and the Tie-up"

This mural shows scores of harassed people all anxious to catch a train and having nothing smaller than a quarter. At the head of the line is a little woman who has just handed in a $2 bill and is trying to pick up her change with her gloves on. Directly behind her is a wild-looking subway patron who has whipped out a pistol, but has not fired at her yet. (This is an oversight on the part of the artist.—Ed.)

Mary Haworth's Mail

Infatuated With Married Man After Short Acquaintance, Engaged Girl, 18, Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 18. My problem may seem odd for a girl my age. But I have always taken things more seriously than most girls my age. I have been going "steady" with a young man for two years and we have been considering marriage but not soon, because we are not financially able. During these two years I have had occasional dates with other men but never enjoyed anyone's company so much as his.

About a month ago I met, through business, a married man some years older than I. I had several dates with him, knowing all the time that he was married. I shouldn't have gone out with him, but for some reason I was eager to see him. I continued seeing him, not often, but each time we grew fonder of each other and he has suggested that perhaps he should leave the city. However, this might interfere with his business, and I wouldn't want that to happen on my account. It is impossible for me to leave.

Should I tell my fiance about this and start dating other men? I know I shouldn't continue seeing this married man, and both of us are trying to figure some way out without hurting anyone. Do you think if I were to try to forget him, and spend all my time with my fiance, that this would be forgotten as I grow older? Please tell me what to do.

BEWILDERED.

Beware of Larceny

DEAR BEWILDERED: If this man's wife had a mink coat, let us say, which you had seen and admired, would it occur to you to try to smuggle it out of her home and wear it without her knowledge? No, indeed. So outlandish an idea would horrify you. Such behavior, you would immediately reason, would brand you a thief or crackpot, or both. Well, in my opinion, you have no more right to stolen hours of sweethearting companionship with this woman's husband than you would have the right to enjoy—by stealth—any other admirable, enviable or desirable objects to which she had established legitimate prior claim.

There is no question but what, if you give yourself half a chance, you will speedily outgrow this crush—not only to the point of being easily able to live without the man, but more probably to the point of wondering, a few years hence, how you could ever have taken him so seriously in the first place. However, the possibility of forgetting should not be the question uppermost in your mind. The question is—how to get out of this quagmire before your predicament is observed, and before your principles are further compromised.

I think the quickest way of breaking the spell is to make a clean breast of the situation to some altogether trustworthy intimate. If your mother were a person of adequate wisdom, sympathy and understanding, she would be the ideal confidante and guide. However, if (in your opinion) she doesn't measure up, and you feel your fiance can be counted on, than by all means tell him your story (without divulging the married man's name) and get his opinions and recommendations.

It would be my guess that this man is taking a mean advantage of your emotional naivete, as compared to his seasoned experience, and I predict that continued association with him would eventually twist your personality out of wholesome and seemly mold. Of the two men, it would appear that your fiance is much the finer person—if only because he has been careful not to experiment with your emotions, in view of the fact that marriage is out of the question for some years yet. I think it is the emotional excitation which this man represents (and probably doesn't hesitate to evoke), which holds you fascinated; the old story of the moth and the flame. Whereas your fiance is your friend, thinking of your happiness in terms of how to promote and protect it, this man is your enemy, a potential despoiler of your integrity and peace of mind.

I don't put much stock in his talk of leaving the city. It is a form of melodramatic gesticulating, most likely. If he is willing to make so great a sacrifice on your behalf, he would have the comparable gallantry to bow himself out of your life while residing in the same city. The more he loved you, the less would he expose you to the snares and pitfalls (emotional and social) of the current situation to which he continues, spider-like, to hold you. It may be said, without fear of successful contradiction, that any older married man who left-handedly courts an 18-year-old girl is largely devoid of moral principle and really protective concern for her well being.

A Woman's New York

New York, Feb. 14.

HIGH IN an office above Madison avenue sits a pretty blonde girl who is 28 years old and vows that she is the happiest girl in all New York. Her name is Roberta Semple, and if your memory is good you will recall that only a few years ago she was summoning sinners from their evil ways as an evangelist. Her mother is a preacher not unknown to fame as Aimee McPherson, but Roberta finally made a break for freedom, and now she has her own job, a nice little apartment and a heart full of happiness. Roberta spends her days doing research for a popular radio program, and she views her present existence with the highest delight.

"It is good to settle down at last," Roberta told me. "I had a cockeyed childhood, moving from my mother to my grandmother and back. I went to no less than 25 different schools, two of which were in Australia and in Ireland."

ALICE HUGHES

Aimee tried hard to make a preacher out of Roberta. "It wasn't bad. I picked up a lot of tricks from mother, but I wasn't good. Samuel Johnson was right about women preachers. He said they are like a dog walking on its hind legs. It isn't done well but you are surprised that it is done at all."

Then romance took a crack at Roberta. When she was 20 she fell in love with the purser on a round-the-world cruise, and they were married in Singapore. It lasted three years. Roberta is still good friends with him, as she is with her mother—at a distance.

"Mother and I don't always agree and it upsets her terribly if you contradict her. Some day I'm going to write a book on the technique of being a celebrity's daughter." It should be good. And it is a pleasure to find Roberta Semple here, free and unusually happy. It is rare and swell.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—My jealousy had its hardiest workout of the season the day the Normandie set sail on that 24-day cruise to Rio and back, with plenty of stopovers. Just imagine 10,500 miles in Southern waters at this time of year! I did, and it almost broke me down. On board was my old friend the Grand Duchess Marie, whose job it will be to take official photographs of the long and happy trip. If I want to avoid the deadly sin of envy, the best thing for me to do is to keep away from the Hudson River piers when a big cruise ship heads South!

Many of us who saw the movie version of "Idiot's Delight," starring Norma Shearer and Clark Gable, thought the players were speaking sheer gibberish in some of the scenes. Looking into the matter, I found the actors were really talking Esperanto, which was Hollywood's way of keeping the locale purely mythical. This is the first time that international language has been given official cognizance on either stage or screen. I learn that there are actually 4,000,000 Esperanto talkers in the United States and will they be pleased!

Jane Cowl has just made a speech at a luncheon of the local Smith College Club. Well, if Aunt Janie was in good form and in a mood to call a spade a shovel, the girls certainly heard something. No one on the American stage can dish it out like Jane when she is in the mood.

I have found a new note in ensembling, which is to match the veil on your hat with a similar ruffled veil on your taffeta petticoat. Smart birds, these merchants. When you buy the petticoat you buy a hat veil, too, adding up two sales instead of one. No wonder the stores manage to keep going.

The Gentler Sex

The Thirteenth Chair

Your hostess has to sit at the speakers' table, but that will be all right, because she is going to put you with a group of her very best friends. She does especially want you to meet Lelia Tinkle—you and Lelia will be crazy about each other . . . yes and Carolyn Trapp will be at your table—you'll adore Carolyn, she's one of the old Rufus Trapps . . . and then there's Mrs. Hicks Puffer—she was a Hicks and she's on a lot of boards . . . and Mrs. Vance Otter's another very lovely woman. Oh, you'll enjoy them all and of course, they'll enjoy you.

You find yourself seated between Lelia Tinkle and Mrs. Puffer. Both are in the midst of earnest and apparently secret conversations with their neighbors. Mrs. Puffer turns dutifully toward you. "I don't believe I got your name Mrs.—or is it Miss——?"

"Ripple" you supply—and it is "Miss."

Oh, yes," says Mrs. Puffer. "Mrs. Otter, Miss Rivers. Mrs. Otter on the other side, bows sweetly and continues . . . "but after all, do you think she—you know who I mean—is exactly the type of woman we want?"

You turn hopefully toward Lelia Tinkle. After what seems an eternity, she becomes aware of your presence. "Do you know Miss Trapp," she asks motioning her neighbor on her left, "Miss ——Miss——"

"Ripple" you supply.

Miss Trapp surveys you appraisingly. "Did I or didn't I see you at the Dance Symphonie Monday night?" she asks. You admit that she didn't. "You know I had an idea I had seen you somewhere before," she says languidly as she reaches for another cigarette.

You start to explain that you are one of those persons whom everybody has always seen somewhere—

"Wait, Marjorie! Give me a light," interrupts Miss Trapp turning to the neighbor on her far side. She then turns again to Lelia Tinkle. "Well, how much alimony do you think Estelle will ask for?"

You sit waiting eagerly for Mrs. Puffer to drop you a crumb of conversation. Perhaps though you should be more aggressive yourself, not act so aloof. So you turn brightly and smilingly to Mrs Puffer. "Aren't the jonquils perfectly lovely?" you exclaim.

Mrs. Puffer regards you absently, "Beg pardon? . . . Oh, yes, the jonquils! Yes, they are lovely." Just then a happy idea seems to strike her. "Say," she exclaims turning to Mrs. Otter, "how would Mrs Prince Rockbottom do on that committee?"

The fruit cups mercifully arrive. Lelia Tinkle agrees with you that they look luscious. She begins to thaw out. "Are you a stranger here?" she asks as she reaches for an olive.

You start eagerly to answer—"Say, Lelia, what time did you and Tom get home last night?" calls a young matron from across the table.

"What do you mean last night?" laughs Lelia shrugging her shoulders.

Carolyn Trapp leaps in to tell that she didn't get home until 3 o'clock in the morning. Someone else didn't get in until 4 . . . Did they know Chett Gink's wife had to drive him home . . . Wasn't Pete Jenks a scream . . .

The waiter has brought the chicken patties and peas. Mrs. Puffer is turning toward you graciously. You smirk at her expectantly. "Miss Brooks," she says sweetly," I wonder if I could trouble you for the salt?"

A Mrs. Tweed on the other side of the table calls to ask Carolyn Trapp if she has heard from Buzz and Clara since they sailed. Carolyn has. They are at Havana. "Oh, yes, Buzz and Clara!" exclaims Mrs. Puffer. "How are they?" "Oh, yes, Buzz and Clara," echoes Mrs. Otter. "Didn't they have a beautiful wedding . . ."

The luncheon has adjourned. Mrs. Puffer turns patronizingly toward you. "So glad to have met you Miss—it's Miss, isn't it—Miss Waters." Lelia Tinkle, who has started away, suddenly turns and comes back, "It's been nice meeting you, Miss Ripple," she says. "I hope I see you—oh, say wait a minute, Carolyn! I want to talk to you about something."

Lighter Chairs And Sofas Called Trend for 1939

Stylists at the winter home furnishings trade shows in Chicago report that there will be a definite trend in 1939 toward lighter, more graceful, and better-styled sofas and chairs.

An emphasis on good design and high quality in the materials used mark the newest upholstered pieces. Curled hair is the most popular filling for the better overstuffed pieces because it successfully combines comfort with hardihood and long life.

Red shades will top all other colors in upholstered furniture during the coming months with brown next in popularity, according to the style experts. Blue and green will tie for third place. Included in the laurel-winning reds will be rust, burgundy, henna, Du Barry, wine, and plum. A newcomer among the popular shades for 1939 will be beige, or mocha, as it is frequently called.

Furniture buyers and stylists say stripes and floral patterns will lead the field in upholstery designs, and velours, pile mohairs, friezes, tapestries and brocatelles will be the important fabrics to look for when you choose your new living room set.

Modern and eighteenth century styles will continue a neck-and-neck race for leadership in period living rooms.

Plenty of Rest Is Essential in Gaining Weight

By Ida Jean Kain.

SO YOU want to gain weight? Well, that takes all the excitement out of your life for a time—no late bridge parties, night clubs or dancing until the wee small hours. You can't gain that way.

You must go to bed early. Ten p. m. should find you in bed, very relaxed, and if you are extremely tired or nervous, make it 9 p. m. You may not be able to go to sleep right away, but you can relax and rest. That saves your calorie expenditure.

Caused by Fatigue

Underweight is often caused by chronic fatigue. This sets up a vicious circle . . . the worn-out underweight is disinterested in food and, since the digestive system is directly affected by fatigue, this may be a good thing. Such a state of affairs, however, must not go on or you will become thinner, more easily tired and have even less appetite.

In gaining weight you must work from every angle. Plan a definite amount of rational exercise in the fresh air. Take a leisurely walk for at least 30 minutes a day and in good weather try to be out-of-doors for an hour or two a day. Sun and fresh air induce relaxation, which is most important. When you are relaxed, you sleep soundly at night.

Highly strung underweights need rest in the daytime as well as at night. It is an excellent plan to rest before meals, whenever possible. Try to manage a 15 to 20 minute rest before eating. Lie down and just let go with your mind and your muscles. Career girls cannot manage that, but at least they can relax at noon instead of shopping. A rest following the meal aids the assimilation of food.

Appetite Important

If you work up a keen appetite, however, you won't need to worry about digestion or assimilation, for appetite is the promise to take care of food.

The underweight girl is apt to go complainingly along her way, feeling under par most of the time but not actually doing anything about it. If you are tired and worn out, have a thorough check-over by the family doctor and let him get you back on the right track. Perhaps you have forgotten or never known that feeling of exuberant health. Then you are missing half the fun in life.

Scandinavian Royal Visitors to U. S. Portrayed by Their Ministers

Danish, Norwegian Envoys Describe Crown Princes and Princesses Who Will Shortly Arrive in Washington

By Hope Ridings Miller,

The Post Society Editor.

FRIENDLY TIES between the United States and two Scandinavian countries were drawn a notch closer yesterday when the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted, and the Minister of Norway, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, gave a sizable gathering a "preview" of forthcoming visits of royal personages from their homelands.

HOPE R. MILLER

The occasion was a luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club, and the company included a near-record turn-out of the club membership, several official hostesses and a number of social notables. Mme. Wadsted and Mme. Morgenstierne shared honors with their husbands as guests of the club.

In his talk, Minister Wadsted described Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark as a man of wide interests, a naval officer, sportsman and student with an absorbing interest in music and a wide knowledge of his country's problems. Crown Princess Ingrid was portrayed in equally glowing terms and it was pointed out that she, being of Swedish birth, is a second cousin to the Crown Princess Martha of Norway.

The royal Danish couple will approach America from the West, arriving in Los Angeles on April 6; make a brief visit at a number of points across the county; come East for a stay as guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park and for a visit to the New York's World's Fair before sailing May 10 on the Queen Mary. While plans for their arrival in Washington have not yet been completed, the Minister said they would be here some time after May 2, the date on which they will attend exercises in connection with the formal opening of Denmark's building at the World's Fair.

To Visit Capital Early in July

A much longer "American experience" is being planned for Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway, according to the Norwegian Minister who yesterday impressed his audience with his sincerity and delighted it with his dry wit. Like Denmark's royal couple, the Norwegian Crown Prince and Princess will visit across the country, but they will begin in the usual fashion by starting in New York and then going West. According to present plans, they will arrive April 27; will visit in Hyde Park, see the New York Fair, and then start their journey toward the West Coast.

Early in July they will come to Washington for a short stay before returning to New York to sail on July 6. Minister Morgenstierne pointed out that his country's Crown Prince is a first cousin of Denmark's Crown Prince and he emphasized what Minister Wadsted had mentioned—that there is a very close relationship between the two and between their families.

Described as 'Modern Couple'

Prince Olav and Princess Martha are "a thoroughly modern royal couple," according to the Norwegian Minister. They live at a country place near Oslo; enjoy and excell in outdoor sports; take an intensive interest in national affairs, and have done much to promote activity in native arts and crafts. He described their forthcoming visit as a climax in a series of historic developments," beginning back when the first Norwegians came to settle in this country. The couple will spend much of their time here in visiting Norwegian communities, he said.

Among guests of club members who attended the luncheon were Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Ambassador of Turkey; Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Amos Fries, Mrs. J. Parken Van Zandt (Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt), Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Alice Nibley Smoot and Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WASHINGTONIANS are apt to feel quite at home when they visit the New York World's Fair this spring, as among the hostesses will be their own Mrs. Matthew Hanna. She is currently the envy of all her friends as she has just secured this job, and will make her home at elegant Hampshire House while there.

The German-born widow of an American diplomat, Mrs. Hanna has lived in South America, Europe and Latin America, and speaks five languages. She has just returned to Washington after a visit of several months in California and Mexico.

Another Washington woman, Mrs. Emory Sands, has been active in plans for the Fair ever since it was just a gleam in the eye of some New York businessmen. Her field has been foreign participation in the Fair.

THOUGH the Greek pavilion at the fair is one of the few which has not yet been constructed, the Minister of Greece, Demetrios Sicilianos, is busy as a bird dog over plans for his country's exhibit. He is Greece's commissioner to the forthcoming spectacle, and while home on business this winter personally selected the art objects which will be shipped from Athens. He has chosen a statue from the Parthenon and numerous other priceless works. He also picked up in Budapest a Renoir for his own private collection, which centers around an El Greco, the minister's most cherished possession.

MR. SICILIANOS was among the guests at the small cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Edgar Prochnik. Their house on Twenty-fourth street, just around the corner from the Austrian Legation, their former home, is comfortable and attractive, with a large living room which looks as though it might once have been two.

Informality was the keynote of the party. Mme. Prochnik looked as smart as one would expect from one in the clothes business in a red and black jacket over a long black skirt. Her two pretty daughters, Mrs. Jean de Sibour and young Patricia Prochnik, assisted their mother.

Mrs. John R. Williams, who is one of those fortunate people who can sit comfortably in a chair at a party and always be sure of being surrounded, was an early arrival. Mrs. Wallach Merriam held court from another chair, and others glimpsed were Mrs. Frank Letts, in black; Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., who topped off her ensemble with a crimson turban; Dr. Hans Thomsen, who was being quizzed about the report in a column yesterday that a new Ambassador would arrive from Germany in two months, but said he hadn't heard anything of the kind; A. F. H. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, of The Netherlands Legation, and one or two others.

Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, neighbors of the Prochniks, were accompanied by their charming house guest, Miss Mary Finch, a debutante from New York.

MR. PROCHNIK starts today a series of lectures on politics which he will give to a group of Washington women who want to make sure of being up on the latest news from Europe. The first will be held at the home of Mrs. James Beck.

HEADED South today, two by sea and one by land, are Mrs. Harry Flood, Miss Eleanor Flood and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios. The Floods will sail on the Queen of Bermuda for two weeks in Bermuda, and Mrs. Exnicios will join her husband in Palm Beach. Nancy Leiter, who with Mrs. Leiter is in Baltimore, will leave from there March 3 for a stay in Palm Beach. Mrs. Leiter will return here February 25 for a week or two before heading in the same direction.

WASHINGTON is certainly making up for its earlier lag behind New York in the matter of society working in night clubs, and hardly a week passes now without a new face or voice from the social register appearing in one of the smart dancing places. Last evening a triple debut took place at the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh, when Junia Culbertson opened a singing engagement and the new dance team of Larry Baker and Austine McDonnell made its first appearance.

By far the most professional in manner of all the society singers, Miss Culbertson wore the gold and silver lace dress in which she appeared in the recent Junior League Follies, and sang everything from semiclassical to torch songs. Austine, who appeared earlier in the season at the now defunct Heigh-Ho, wore a lovely dress with a skirt of lime green and violet tulle and a violet bodice.

MRS. LAWRENCE BAKER sat proudly at a rigside table with the equally beaming Maj. and Mrs. Austin McDonnell, Griffith Warfueld and Mrs. Rodgers Barker, Mr. and Mrs. John Selby, Randall Hagner, jr., and Caroline Cecil were also among the applauders.

Dinners Precede La Boheme, Second of Season's Operas

Another large and smart audience turned out last evening for the performance at Constitution Hall of "La Boheme," the second in the series of four operas being given this week by the Washington Opera Association.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring were among the dinner hosts, later occupying their box with their guests. In the party were the Attorney General, Frank Murphy; Mrs. Robert Greenwood, of Fitchburg, Mass., sister of the hostess; Miss Ruth Grafstron, of New York, and Miss Ann Parker, daughter of Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, U. S. A., and Mrs. Parker.

The Charge d'Affaires of the Italian Embassy and Signora Cosmelli had a box and entertained several members of the embassy staff. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Morris gave a dinner at the Cosmos Club preceding the opera, their guests including Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster and Col. and Mrs. Harold Marsh.

Kemp Slaughter gave a dinner before the opera in honor of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Clark, of Baltimore. Mr. and Mrs. Sears Garnett and Miss Cornelia Bowie were also in the party, and later they occupied Miss Bowie's box.

Other boxholders last evening included Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Col. Frank Morrow, Dr. William McClellan, Mrs. Gerry Johnson, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Margaret Nohowell, Mrs. Emmett O'Neil, and Mrs. Mary Adams.

D. C. Congress Calls Superintendent's Rule Over Board Undemocratic

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The board of managers of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers yesterday went on record opposingthe Griffenhagenr eport insofar as it applies to the school system. The proposal to vest the superintendent with power to appoint a board which would be responsible to him, the women termed a plan "diametrically opposed to democratic form of government." At present the superintendent serves under the board which is appointed by the District judges.

Action was taken at a meeting of the board of managers, held at the Dennison vocational school yesterday morning. The nominating committee, headed by Mrs. George Baise, also presented its slate, with Mrs. Clifton D. Lowe proposed as president to succeed Mrs. Walter B. Fry. Other officers to be voted on this year are Mrs. P. C. Eilet, for first vice president; Mrs. J. Darlington Denit, third vice president; Mrs. Evelyn Bright Buckley, fifth vice president, and Mrs. William Streeter, seventh vice president.

Vaccination Repeal Opposed by Board

Members of the board also are contributing to the "blood bank" fund individually and each P.-T. A. unit is making a contribution.

The student aid committee of which Mrs. L. A. Brooks is chairman reported 593 children cared for during January. They were given 1,156 garments, 431 pairs of shoes and 352 pairs of rubbers. Mrs. T. David Gates, chairman of the music committee, announced rehearsals for the Mothersingers Chorus would begin Tuesday of next week and continue weekly on Tuesdays at 10:30 a. m. in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Gold Discusses Laws On Marriage and Divorce

Lawyer Who Helped Draw Up District Provisions Says There Is Little Hope Of Uniform Rules for the States

There is little hope of ever having uniform marriage and divorce laws for the States, Mrs. Martha Gold, of the D. C. Women's Bar Association yesterday told the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters. Addressing a luncheon meeting of the department of government and the legal status of women of the league at the Y. W. C. A., Mrs. Gold traced the history of the divorce laws in the District and discussed provisions elsewhere.

With Nevada deriving an income of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 yearly from its divorce mill, Mrs. Gold said she was of the opinion there was little likelihood of this State and others which have made divorce easy, being willing to give up such a prosperous business.

Federal legislation is not the solution, she said. Whatever uniform provisions are secured should be obtained in the form of amendments to State laws.

Cites New Jersey's Law as Best

She cited New Jersey's provision as a model for States interested in halting the migration of divorce-seekers from their actual places of residence. There, the law provides that divorces may be granted person living out of their jurisdiction at the time cause for divorce arose, providing the State which was their place of residence at that time recognizes the cause set forth as grounds for the action.

Discussing the District law based on recommendations drawn up by Mrs. Gold as representative of the women's bar, and George C. Gertman, representing the men's bar association, she mentioned the fact that cruelty was eliminated as grounds because it was not recognized by the Maryland law.

"It is unfortunate that the District Committee should have on it members from Maryland and Virginia," said Mrs. Gold. "The interests of those States are such that the District can't have a law more liberal than theirs."

Suffrage Leaders Are Honored

Mrs. Gold was introduced by Mrs. Pearl B. Klein, chairman of the department of government and legal status of women, for the league, who also presented Miss Susan B. Anthony, grandniece of the suffrage leader, and Mrs. Anna B. Hendley. Miss Anthony talked on her greataunt, whose birthday was yesterday, and Mrs. Hendley talked both on Miss Anthony and the later suffrage leader, Anna Howard Shaw. The meeting was opened with a gavel belonging to Miss Hendley, which was used by Miss Anthony at a great suffrage meeting here in the '80s.

One of the anecdotes told by Miss Anthony was of the famous red shawl worn by her greataunt. She quoted from an issue of The Washington Post in 1888 which said: "Spring is not heralded by the robin redbreast, but by the coming of Miss Anthony's red hawl." She related that on one occasion Miss Anthony, to the dismay of newspaper reporters, appeared at a large meeting with a white shawl over her shoulders. They sent her a note: "No red shawl, no report of the meeting." and not until she had the familiar garment brought to her did they begin taking notes.

Calvert, jr., president of the society, and Mrs. Calvert, Representative and Mrs. Sasscer, Judge Mattingly, Mrs. McFadden, Mrs. Daisy LaCoppidan, southern Maryland, chairman of the United Democratic Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Frank B. R., at the board meeting in Memorial Continental Hall yesterday, asked members to try to locate a pink Staffordshire pitcher and bowl. Mrs. Lee R. A. R. had made the gift of a brass warming pan.

Husbands Take Amusing Poke At Club Wives

Present Skit Before American Association Of University Women

The side of the martyred husband of the club woman was dramatically presented in a skit, "Safety Pins and Darning Needles," given at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women last night by the husbands for the entertainment of their wives.

A. Charter Heslep was author of the skit in which he and a group of other husbands took part. Their only concession to their feminine roles in the first scenes was the wearing of doll hats perched on their heads at stylish angles. The skit was comprised of four supposed rehearsals for an entertainment suitable for a club program. The first scene was a club business meeting, the second a tea, and the third a study group. The lines in each instance indicated how well the men understood the "ins and outs" of club activities. The final scene was the one in which they took evident satisfaction. Doffing their miniature hats, they donned aprons and were just themselves on any Monday night (Monday is the day of the regular tea at the clubhouse).

To the tune of "Four Little Angels of Peace," from "Pins and Needles," they sang:

Monday night martyrs to tea are we,
While our wives visit sociably.

Those, in addition to Mr. Heslep, who took part were Duard Sandifer, Richard Hogue, Leslie H. Whitten, G. R. Wilhelm, Hampton D. Percy, Edmund Campbell, Edmund Vial and Gregory Hankin.

Equal Rights Advocate Flier Here For Anthony Rites

Bringing resolutions from a score of New Jersey clubs and organizations urging passage of the equal rights amendment to the Constitution, Mrs. Constance W. Hand, member of the House of Assembly of New Jersey, will arrive here by airplane today at 3:30 p. m. to attend the ceremony tonight in the crypt of the Capitol commemorating the 119th anniversary of the birth of Susan B. Anthony, pioneer advocate of equal rights.

The ceremony is being arranged by the National Woman's Party, which will be joined by representatives of 40 national organizations, in memory of Miss Anthony.

Mrs. Hand is bringing a wreath which she will place at the base of the statue of Miss Anthony. She has invited the New Jersey delegation in Congress to be present at the ceremonies at which Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, and Representative Robert J. George Holmes Eulogized by Mgr. O'Dwyer

Mrs. Roosevelt Among Those at Military Funeral

Friends and admirers from all walks of life including, Mrs. Roosevelt, yesterday paid last respects to George R. Holmes, veteran Washington newspaperman, at simple military services held in Fort Myer Chapel and Arlington Cemetery.

Scores of prominent leaders joined the tribute to the chief of the International News Service Bureau here, who died Sunday at the age of 44.

The eulogy for Mr. Holmes, who had never been identified with any church, was delivered by Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer, director of National Shrine of Immaculate Conception and a close friend of the correspondent.

Likened to Genius

Mgr. O'Dwyer likened the late newspaperman's gifts to those of a genius. "Industry, intelligence, and sympathy, ever guided by a sensitive conscience, won him eminence in his profession," Father O'Dwyer said. A passionate sense of justice, generosity, and a hatred of cant and complacency marked his life, he declared. Father O'Dwyer ended his eulogy with lines from Shelley's "Adonais," written in memory of the poet, Keats.

"He lives, he wakes—'tis death is dead, not he;
Mourn not for Adonais—thou young dawn,
Turn all thy dew to splendor, for from thee
The spirit thou lamentest is not gone;
Ye caverns and ye forests, cease to moan;
He is made one with nature; there is heard
His voice in all her music, from the moan
Of Thunder, to the song of night's sweet bird.

He is a presence to be felt and known
In darkness and in light; from herb to stone,
Spreading itself where'er that power may move
Which has withdrawn his being to its own.
He is a portion of the loveliness
Which once he made lovely;
He doth bear his part."

Two songs that had been favorites of Holmes were sung by the Gridiron quartet—William Raymond, Edwin Steffe, Fred East and Charles Tittman.

Bugle Sounds Taps

At Arlington the casket, covered only by an American flag, was lowered into the grave, close to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. The military escort fired three volleys; the bugle sounded "Taps."

Delegations from the White House Correspondents Association, congressional correspondents, National Press Club and Gridiron Club participated in the rites. Columbia Broadcasting System observed one minute's silence during the ceremony.

In Congress, Representative Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, declared that "newspaperdom and the country can ill afford the loss of such men as George Holmes." "The world is poorer for his untimely death," he said, lauding both his brilliant record as journalist and soldier.

Randolph Lauds D. C. Vote Desire

Representative Calls Demand Higher Than In Rest of U. S., Predicts Victory

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, last night praised "an overwhelming majority" of Capital residents who favor local suffrage, in a renewed demand for District voting rights at a meeting of the Burleith Citizens Association.

"No American citizen should be denied the privileges of representation," Randolph declared at the meeting in Gordon Junior High School. There is "no mooring" for the District as long as its residents cannot exercise suffrage privileges in "their legal residences," he said.

Predicts Victory

Randolph called the "vast outpouring of 90,000 District men and women" seeking suffrage in the poll conducted last April by the District Suffrage Association a "wonderful indication." He said Congress ultimately would become "impressed" with this District sentiment and enact local suffrage legislation.

Randolph contrasted the interest of District residents in suffrage with a lack of interest in voting privileges in other parts of the country. In the last election, as few as 12 per cent of the voters in some States went to the polls, he said.

Urges More Voting in U. S.

Urging greater interest in suffrage throughout the county, Randolph called attention to over 5,000,000 aliens who have failed to declare their intention to become citizens.

Randolph said he would today introduce a bill in Congress for deportation of aliens who did not declare their intention of becoming citizens, and exercising the right to vote, within a year.

Judge Blames Community

"It is the community that is responsible in each and every case of child delinquency," Judge Fay Bentley of the District Juvenile Court told members of the Northern Seventh Street Business Men's Association last night.

Attributing criminality in youth to such things as bad housing, low standard of living, parental neglect and lack of recreational facilities, Judge Bentley told the association that the north Seventh street area was "as bad as any in the city."

Prohibiting sale of junk by minors unless accompanied by their parents, she predicted, would eliminate 50 per cent of the petty thievery among juveniles within five years.

Judge Bentley described the Juvenile Court as "a money making business for the taxpayers of the District of Columbia" in adult cases of nonsupport where the court relieves private or public charities of the burden. At least half the cases that come before the court are adult, she said.

Tax Boost Opposed

The taxation committee of the Logan Thomas Circle Citizens' Association last night reported unfavorably on a real estate tax increase, sales tax or re-enactment of the business privilege tax.

The committee recommended that if the real estate tax must be increased, a $1.75 rate be the limit and that taxation of income is the best method if more taxes are essential.

The association adopted a resolution in favor of investigating the expendency of eliminating retail liquor stores and supplanting them with municipally operated shops.

A committee was appointed to cooperate with the Metropolitan Police Boys Club finance committee. Members are: Mrs. Loretta Haig, Mrs. Grace Sparrow, Mrs. Gertrude Young, John F. Drake and H. M. Fulton.

Youngsters Have Lots of Fun as They Remember Their Valentines

All-day suckers and other goodies don't interrupt June Hoy, Bob Taylor, Diane Powelson and Morley Tubbs (center) while they enjoy themselves at the first grade party at Thomson School. At the left, John Porter believes in doing things in a big way as he gives Fay Faulkner a valentine almost as large as himself, and from the look on her face he seems to be succeeding. Both youngsters are eight and attend Force Scholo. At the right, Betty Fram is strictly business as she sells stamps to Gene Day, so his girl will be sure to get a remembrance from her Valentine. They are six and go to the Brighwtood School.

Gallinger May Be Revamped, Collins Says

Committee Head Intimates Inquiry on Health Department

Gallinger Hospital may be reorganized from "top to bottom" when House hearings start on the 1937 District supply bill, Chairman Collins, of the sub-committee on District appropriations, indicated yesterday.

Commenting on current reports on conditions at Gallinger, Collins said: "If condition s at Gallinger are as bad as described in some of the newspaper stories I've read and the management and employes are as inefficient as the newspaper accounts indicate, it's evident that the hospital ought to be restaffed from top to bottom."

The District Committee chairman intimated that the reorganization may start in the Health Department, which has charge of the hospital, and that the investigation may include Health Officer George G. Ruhland and subordinate officials.

Last year, it was recalled, Collins was dissatisfied with the administration of the Health Department, and created the position of business manager. Since the position was filled there have been reports of friction between the business manager and the health officer.

D. C. Parking Lots Sought to End Jam

Plans for a series of municipal parking lots on the fringe of the business district to solve parking difficulties in the downtown area were revealed yesterday after a conference of Federal traffic officials with a committee of the Keystone Automobile Club.

According to the plan, which was heard by William A. Van Duzer, director of vehicles and traffic, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, parking lots would be financed from gasoline tax and parking-meter revenues.

Evolution of Rose Culture Described to Garden Clubs

Three-Day Institute Is Sponsored By Potomac Society; Mechanics Of Cross-Pollenating Illustrated

How the gorgeous roses that bloom in modern gardens were developed from the small wild rose of the meadows was explained to 50 members of the Potomac Rose Society and other local garden clubs last night at the first meeting of a three-day institute of rose growing sponsored by the Potomac group in George Washington University.

In 1791 there were only 25 known varieties of rose, Commander Walter S. Diehl told the gathering, all of them wild roses that bloomed only once. But 30 years later, largely because of the enthusiastic encouragement of the Empress Eubenie, 2,562 varieties had been developed in France, he said.

The story of the patient study and experiments of rose lovers all over the world who since that time have developed the 4,000 and more varieties known today was told by Commander Diehl and Dr. J. A. Gamble.

They dealt particularly with the hybrid tea roses, the yellowish-red flowers, smelling faintly of tea, which have been produced from Chinese and French parent roses, and other types of perennial roses developed by crossing different stocks.

The mechanics of the "cross-pollenating" process, by which two different roses are mated to produce a hybrid, was explained in detail by Prof. Paul W. Bowman, illustrating his talk with lantern slides to show what goes on inside the germ cells of the plants.

Col. W. H. England, member of the Potomac Rose Society, presided over the meeting. Mrs. Whitman Cross, president of the society, said a few words of greeting, and Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, welcomed the gathering to the university.

'Twas a Dignified Affair, That Private Chauffeurs' Ball

The black limousines with the three-number license tags stayed in garage berths last night as their drivers, elite of Washington motorists, taxied to the Raleigh Hotel for the fifteenth annual ball of the Private Cab Chauffeurs Benevolent Association.

The association, sometimes called the "Four Hundred" of local drivers, is actually far more exclusive—less than 150 now make the grade. Three years of private driving, a salary equivalent to $35 a week and an unblemished driving record are minimum entrance requirements.

As conservative in their merry-making as with their membership policy, the drivers last night took the floor early and went home early.

Most members ignored the invitation to don red paper hats for the occasion, though a few wore the gay headgear at a sober angle. Discreet blowing of tin horns was, for the most part, left to the ladies. Only a scattering of younger couples attempted the more athletic dance steps of recent vintage.

Proceeds of the party go to the association's benevolent fund, from which benefit payments are made to members and their families in time of distress.

Stolen Car Racket Testimony Will Continue Today

Dr. Steinberg Urges Hebrew CultureRevival

Tells Center He Sees Evidence of Moral Collapse

Rabbi Milton Steinberg, of New York, told an audience in the Jewish Community Center last night that far from being a race apart, Jews are very similar to other breeds of man but that a revival of Hebrew culture is necessary to replace the moral collapse now evident in Jewish life.

Discussing the psychology of a modern Jew, Steinberg divided his subject into the "normal" and the "abnormal brought about by modern circumstances." No clear cut generalization exists for any Jewish traits, he declared, although certain characteristics appear with frequency enough to warrant such loose generalizations as that the Jew is: intellectual, averse to violence, possessed of business acumen, philanthropic and devoted to family.

These traits came to be typical after centuries of living in the hostile environments of eastern Europe when every man's hand was against the Jew and he was forced to turn inward for salvation, he said. Today, Steinberg continued, there is danger that feeling against Jews in the modern world will turn the race even further inward and create a psychopathic problem of world proportions.

Traits brought on by circumstances disappear in two or three generations of residence in America, he added.

Enlarged ICC Held Necessary By Rep. Lea

Enlargement of the Interstate Commerce Commission and concentration by each of its members on a specific phase of the transportation problem was urged last night by Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, chairman of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, before the Federal Transportation Association.

"The country is going to look to the ICC within the next few years for greater results than ever before," Lea said. "Some measure of reorganization is necessary to prepare the commission for these responsibilities."

The ICC, he said, "must be umpire in the fierce competition between railroads, bus lines, trucks and ships and set minimum rates which protect the most economic carrier."

Capital News In Brief

Because a fugitive from the law picked out the roof of a greenhouse as an avenue of escape last night, Gude Brothers, florists, will find it necessary to replace at least 50 panes of glass at their place of business at Bladensburg and Mount Olivet roads northeast.

The fugitive, who weighed no more than 125 pounds, took to the roof after Private M. W. Arney, of the Traffic Bureau, appeared to have him cornered inside among the geraniums.

Arney had asked the man and a companion to proceed to the Twelfth Precinct Station after he discovered their car tags were issued in Maryland and the mans license in District.

Instead the driver speeded way and in trying to make the turn from Bladensburg road onto Mount Olivet road crashed the front of the greenhouse. Both men ran. Arney chased the driver into the greenhouse and would have caught him anywhere but on a glass roof.

Arney weighs a good 170 pounds.

Girls Complain

A "shooting" call hurried two police cars to 1821 Howard road southeast last night. The call was made by girls at a party. The girls complained bitterly that someone had stolen sandwiches and punch from the kitchen while they were in the parlor.

One hour later scout cars again raced to the address, this time on a "suicide" cale, the girls complained again—some boys trying to "crash" the party.

Suffers Powder Burns

A group discharged blank cartridges in a pistol beneath a viaduct in the first block of M street northwest last night.

Suddenly George Broderick, 14, of 58 K street northeast, yelped in pain. Puzzled, his chums took him to Sibley Hospital.

George suffered powder burns on the face, painful but not serious.

Adolphus B. Robinson, 59, night manager of the Gospel Mission, 810 Fifth street northwest, was held up last night and he thinks it's a case of his hand being bitten by the man he fed.

The robber left the mission with $2 loot. Robinson told police the gunman looked like a former beneficiary of the institution.

Military, Patriotic Groups Join Rites In Arlington Cemetery

Delegations from the military services and patriotic organizations will join the United Spanish War Veterans today in the forty-first commemorative services for the 266 men who died the night of February 15, 1898, when the U. S. battleship Maine was destroyed in Havana Harbor by a mysterious explosion, a disaster which precipitated the Spanish-American war.

One thousand persons are expected to attend the wreath-laying ceremonies at 1 p. m. before the Maine's mast, which rises above the graves of the explosion victims in Arlington Cemetery. Sailors, marines and cavalrymen will form a guard of honor.

Representative Martin Smith (Democrat), of Washington, chairman of the House Pensions Committee, will speak at exercises in Fort Myer riding hall, beginning at 2 p. m. Other speakers will be Dr. Jose T. Baron, minister-counselor of the Cuban Embassy, and Thomas W. Payne, commander in chief of the United Spanish War Veterans. John M. 3 Alleged Window Robbers Accused Of Housebreaking

Three alleged members of the "show case gang" that has harassed merchants throughout the Northwest section in the past few months were charged with housebreaking yesterday, following their arrest last week.

Among their victims, police say, in their $1,000-series of liquor raids, were the Mayflower Market,

Man Above State, Says Sir Willmott

Journalist Urges Presbyterians to Be Concerned With 'Eternal Values'

A plea for the preservation of "eternal values" in the confusion of the modern day was made last night at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church by Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of The Times of London.

Addressing the annual "ladies' night" dinner of the Men's Club, a feature of the Lincoln anniversary observance, the journalist stressed: "We should be more concerned with the preservation of the eternal values wrapped up in the individual than in some abstraction called the state."

"Government is the art of establishing a proper relationship between eternal values and the needs of every day," he asserted. "These eternal values reside in the individual—in the personal, political, economic and religious rights of the individual." Democracy, he said, is a state of mind.

"We must not be afraid to set up power in Government as long as we select those in power who will be accountable for its actions," he asserted.

Among the guests were Representatives Harve Tibbott, of Pennsylvania, who sang several songs, accompanied by Mrs. Helen Bellman, and the following officers of the Men's Club: Dr. Edwin N. C. Barnes, president; Verne C. Bonesteel, vice president; J. Kennedy Ireland, secretary; Marshall D. Baxter, treasurer, and others.

Also participating were Bartley Garver, of Roosevelt High School, who gave Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, and a group of 40 singers representing local high schools.

Police Probe Bauer Death

Police last night were investigating the death of Edgar Cecil Bauer, 36, of 1919 Naylor road southeast.

Bauer, according to police, was found unconscious near an outbuilding by members of his family Saturday. Police said they were told he had stumbled and struck his head against the building and that a search for him had been made after he had failed to return to the house.

Bauer died in a hospital yesterday.

The West Virginia State Society will observe its twenty-fifth anniversary tonight at 7 o'clock at a dinner-dance in the Raleigh Hotel. Senator Neely will be honor guest and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson will speak.

Defeat of Japan Predicted by Chinese Diplomat

The optimistic opinion that the innate philosophy of the Chinese to "stick things through" will in the end, enable the Chinese armies, intact in West China, to push back the Japanese to the sea, was expressed last night by Victor Kwong, attache of the Chinese Embassy. He spoke in the Founders' Library of Howard University.

Kwong scouted the idea that the Japanese had come into China to fight the rise of communsm there, stating that the Chinese for ten years prior to their coming had fought communsm successfully under the leadership of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek.

Japan, he said, was catapulted into the position of a first class power by the Russian war, and, lacking the raw materials with which to maintain such a status, has found it necessary to penetrate into Formosa and Manchuria, and China proper.

Kwong predicted the time will come when Japan will be attacked, possibly by Russia, and would be compelled to withdraw her forces. Then he said, the Chinese guerrilla organizations would be ready to turn the withdrawal into a rout.

Riggs, Notary, 79, Walks to Work Every Day

Appointed in 1889 by Harrison, He Has Just Received His Eleventh License From Roosevelt; Feels Like 28, Looks 65

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Maj. Edward F. Riggs feels like 28, looks 65 and will be 79 on April 27. On April 10, 1889, President Benjamin Harrison issued to him his first commission as a notary public and he has been taking people's oaths ever since, which probably makes him one of the oldest notaries in the Capital in point of service.

A small built, wiry fellow who recently suffered his first cold in 30 years—"but it was only a mild one"—Maj. Riggs walks daily from his home at 1615 Kenyon street northwest to his downtown office and back again in the evening. He gives no more thought to retiring from work than a honey bee.

If someone pinned him down to an explanation of his energy, he might point out that he takes a short nap every day, does much walking outdoors, takes a vacation every summer and never touched a drop of liquor in his life. But he does not hold dogmatically that any or all of those factors are responsible for his present state of well being. Just a coincidence, perhaps.

Just one month ago President Roosevelt recommissioned him to another five-year term as a notary public. The certificate was the eleventh Maj. Riggs has received, beginning with President Harrison's in 1889.

Cleveland was the next to license Maj. Riggs, then McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson twice, Coolidge twice and now Franklin D. Roosevelt for the second time. He did not receive certificates from Presidents Harding or Hoover because his term did not expire in their administrations.

A former major in the District National Guard, he was born on lower Pennsylvania avenue near the Capitol and only a few blocks from the old hotel building which now houses the National Guard. His parents were also native Washingtonians. In fact, his great-grandfather was an original inhabitant of the National Capital, settling here in 1800.

For many years Maj. Riggs has served as treasurer of the Sons of the Revolution, District branch.

Every summer he and his wife go to Atlantic City for a rest. They have occupied the same room in the same hotel for the last 21 years.

SEABISCUIT, LAME, MAY NEVER RACE AGAIN

Injured Ace Is Second to Record Time

Star Limps on His Right Foreleg; Today Wins 3-Horse Race; Fear Career Is Ended

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 14.—Grave fears were felt tonight that the mighty Seabiscuit might run no more.

Charles S. Howard's great stake champion pulled up lame and defeated by two and a quarter lengths today in his 1939 debut—a 1-mile handicap won by Neil McCarthy's Today in track record time.

Limping badly, the 6-year-old son of Hard Tack was led to his stable and anxious onlookers, Trainer Tom Smith, and Owner Howard, crowded around to learn the condition of the favorite candidate in the coming $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

Opinion was divided on Seabiscuit's chances of recovery. He has come out of many a race "gimpy," and rounded back into shape. Howard said he had hopes that his prized stake king would be all right, but it would probably not be until tomorrow or later that anything definite could be determined.

Headed for his third crack at the $100,000 handicap purse and a golden chance to surpass the all-time money winning record of Sun Beau —$376,744—today's one mile race was Seabiscuit's eighty-fifth trip to the post. The 'Biscuit's winnings to date total $340,480.

Couldn't Make the Grade

Overhauled by Today, the Biscuit tried gamely to capture the $2,000 purse, but couldn't make the grade and Jockey Georgie Woolf was forced to dismount after the race and lead the horse back to the grandstand. It was the right foreleg that went bad.

Today ran the mile in 1:34 3-5 seconds, breaking the track record of 1:35 4-5 set by Top Row in 1935. Marica was third.

"We won't know until tomorrow the exact seriousness of Seabiscuit's lameness," Trainer Smith said. "He has come out of other races somewhat gimpy, and I have hopes he will come out of this one, too."

It is the veteran Smith that has nursed Seabiscuit and his famed knobby-knees ever since Howard bought the horse, but observers expressed the opinion the 'Biscuits lameness this time was worse than before.

It was Seabiscuit's first race since he defeated War Admiral at Pimlico last November 1.

It was a day of hard luck for Howard. In the race before Seabiscuit's appearance, Howard's Kayak II was beaten, exploding the supposed invincibility of the horse which had been rated by the stable as Seabiscuit's most dangerous rival in the $100,000 race March 4. Kayak II ran third to Bottle Cap and Patty Cake.

Small Crowd Sees Armstrong

Dusky Henry Armstrong, perpetual motion personified, waltzed through an easy four-round exhibition last night at Turner's Arena, showing only flashes of the latent dynamite hidden in his gloves in beating three opponents.

Less than $1,000 was in the till when Armstrong, the only man in history to hold three world titles consecutively, stepped into the ring, but those who turned out received full value for their money.

Armstrong scored several knockdowns at the expense of his first two partners, Kid Bowie and Marcus Pitts, driving home his shots with the power of a heavyweight and the accuracy of a Government tax expert. Billy Banks, his third opponent, survived two rounds of fast milling without going down, but Armstrong was beginning to pour leather into his brown body, and late in the second session probably would have floored him had not the bell tolled. Banks was exhausted at the finish.

Everybody but the referee wore headgear and the "Challengers" evidently aware of Armstrong's punching ability, were as skittish as kittens.

Howie, first in action tried to bull Armstrong, and got away with it for a few minutes as the champion was obviously toying with him. But Howie grew too bold and careless, and Armstrong popped him with a short right hook that traveled about a foot, and the Kid went down. He was up without a count. Another minute elapsed before Armstrong clouted Howie with a short left hook that sent him to his haunches. After that Henry took it easy.

Toby Tobias (142½) survived an early storm of blows tossed by Charley Gilley (143½) and rallied in the closing rounds of their eight-round bout to win the unanimous decision. Action was at a fast pace and Tobias scored a distinct hit with the audience.

Frankie (143¾) staggered Augie Flowers (147) with booming rights to the chin often throughout six rounds of fistcuffing to win an easy decision.

Joe Perry (136¼) outpointed Woodie Buchanan (140) in the initial four-round preliminary.

Terrapins Apparently Stop to Rest Take 57-49 Licking From Lowly Indians

By Jack Munhall.

Assured of a berth in the annual Southern Conference basketball championship tournament by last week's victory over Washington and Lee, Maryland's Terrapins stopped to rest last night and were victims of a surprise scalping party by a rough band of Indians from William and Mary.

To the astonishment of about 1,000 fans, one of the smallest crowds of the season at Ritchie Coliseum, the Terps were rudely upset by the fans Indians, 57-49, in a game featured by excellent long distance shooting and atrocious defense, especially by Maryland.

The lowly Indians, who faced elimination from the tournament play-off in the event of a loss, apparently were not ready to give up and outplayed the heavily favored Maryland team from start to finish. The Terps were never able to overcome a 4-0 advantage the visitors grabbed in the first minute of play and after threatening midway in the second half were falling farther behind at the finish.

In dealing Maryland one of its worst defeats in the Conference, and incidentally its fourth in 11 games, William and Mary unveiled in Virgil Andrews, a short, stocky guard, one of the deadliest set shot artists seen at College Park in many a day.

Eight times from the floor and twice from the charity stripe, Andrews bombarded the basket for a

Promoters Sign Today for Clash Of Louis, Roper

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 14.—Arrangements were completed today for Joe Louis to defend his heavyweight championship against Jack Roper in Los Angeles on April 18.

It was just a coincidence that Mike Jacobs and Tom Gallery, who will promote the affair, selected the thirty-second anniversary of the San Francisco earthquake for Louis' first West Coast title defense.

Gallery was asked about Roper, who reputedly has been fighting as a professional for 15 years, and he predicted that the Roanoke, Va., "trial horse" would give Louis a busy evening.

And how old is Roper? Gallery smiled and then said:

"Not a day over 28. Well—maybe he is older than that. But that California sunshine and fresh air has made a new man out of him."

Faris and Garber Lead Colonials in Fast Detroit Contest

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 14.—George Washington University's sharpshooting Colonials gave a great exhibition here tonight in defeating Wayne University's basketball team, 56 to 46, in a racehorse game played at top speed for the entire 40 minutes.

Led by Forwards Bob Faris and George Garber, the Colonials trailed through the first 13 minutes before cutting loose with a barrage of long shots. George Washington led, 32 to 26, at the intermission after the teams had made one spectacular shot after another.

Faris, one of the best college basketball shots seen in Detroit this winter, scored 20 points to lead the Colonial attack but received plenty of help from Garber, who scored 14 points. Garber was the more spectacular of the two in the first half when he scored 11 points within 15 minutes. In the second half, Faris stepped on the gas to score 13 points inside of 12 minutes.

Anacostia Beats Riders To Score Real Upset

Seaman Stars as Roosevelt Bows, 31-28; Eastern Downs Western In Other Game

By Bill Burnett

The most astonishing prediction of the current schoolboy basketball series was credited to Coach Julian Colangelo, yesterday, when he said, "We'll beat 'em," just before his midget Anacostia team took the floor against one of the strongest teams in the interhigh league, Roosevelt. The Indians upset Roosevelt and the dope by turning in a 31-28 score in their favor.

The other half of the second-to-last doubleheader of the series went to Eastern, as expected, when it dug itself out of a deficit to beat Western, 28 to 20, and end the Westeners' chances of getting into the titular playoff next week.

There was only one word to describe the Roosevelt-Anacostia fray as it got under way. That was "sloppy." The Anacostians, with their continued interception of passes, upset the usually smooth play of Roosevelt, and observers claimed that as the reason the Indians finally won.

Hymie Perlo, Roosevelt guard, started the scoring immediately after the whistle with a long pot shot, but Anacostia's Perry Seaman nulled that lead and pulled his team into a 6-2 lead with two well-placed pivot shots and a pair of charity throws. Lambert Anderson and Johnny Placos added to the advantage with two more foul tosses.

Anacostia led 10-7 at the quarter and 14-10 at half, throughout the periods the Riders floundering around the court trying vainly to

New D. C. Racing Bill Introduced By Congressman

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to legalize horse racing in the District of Columbia was introduced yesterday by Representative Sacks (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

Sacks' bill would create a board of three persons appointed by the District Commissioners to supervise racing under the pari-mutuel betting system.

A minimum of $1,000 would be set on purses. Licensees would be permitted to retain as their "take" 7½ per cent of the pari-mutuel proceeds, with another 1 per cent going into the District treasury. Each race track operator would pay a license fee of $5,000 for each day of operation, plus a tax of 15 per cent of net revenues annually.

Stan Kokie Scores 15 Points to Give Mounts 12th Win

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 14—Mount St. Mary's College, paced by Stan Kokie, sharpshooting guard from Hazleton, Pa., defeated Catholic University for the second time this season tonight by a score of 37-28. Kokie, who scored 23 points against the Cardinals in Washington a few weeks ago, added 15 to his total tonight.

The Mountaineers assumed a 9-7 lead in the first eight minutes of play but Catholic U. came back to pull ahead for the only time during the game, 13-9, on field goals by Corrig and White. Kokie developed a hot hand and the Emmitsburg quint sprinted into a 17-14 advantage at half time.

The victory was the twelfth in 15 starts for the Mountmen this season.

Jockey Tries to Save Seabiscuit Suffering as Lame Horse Nears Finish

Pictured below is the finish of yesterday's trial race with Today forging to the wire ahead of Seabiscuit. Jockey Georgie Woolf can be seen with one hand on the handicap champion's neck as he tries to keep his weight off the horse's back. Evidently Seabiscuit went lame in the stretch run for Woolf seems to have gotten the signal. It was the first appearance of the C. S. Howard star in a race since his victory over War Admiral in the Pimlico Special in Maryland last November. Grave fears are held that Seabiscuit may not race again. The condition of his right foreleg, off the ground in the Wirephoto above, holds the answer to whether he will continue to race. If Seabiscuit's career is ended, Owner C. S. Howard will establish the son of Hard Tack in stud service in California. Yesterday's race was the eighty-fifth for Seabiscuit

Without Shirley Povich

By Lewis F. Atchison.

ATCHISON.

Prof. Frank Menke, the eminent sports chronicler who spends his spare moments browsing through ancient journals and jotting down pertinent facts found therein, has recently published his sports encyclopedia, which includes data on everything from the Carpathian sculling championships (49 B. C.) to the 1938 finalists in the pie-eating contest at Seaside Park.

Prof. Menke, it is estimated, has burrowed, through more books than an entire staff of the Congressional Library. The way he devours pages is astounding, and his fame has justly been broadcast throughout the length and breadth of the country—as well as in foreign territories (add 50 cents extra for postage). Why, only two months ago the business agent of a book-worms local solicited him for advice on speeding up production. Their reputation, it seems, was suffering in view of Prof. Menke's unquenchable thirst for the printed word. There was talk in some well established libraries of laying off whole colonies of worms and employing Prof. Menke to go through the library. Happily, this was forestalled by the National Labor Relations Board, which ruled that Menke would have to remain in the sports field, thus leaving all other departments of literature the private poaching ground of the worms.

Columnist in Two Chapters

Prof. Menke's fame, as we noted above, has spread like a malicious rumor, and no modern sports department is complete without copy of the friendly lfitle red book ($2 per copy), which can make a columnist of you in two brief chapters. Try it sometime, on your own mimeograph. But Prof. Menke's book, alas, has not reached that great mass of humanity, to wit, the sporting public. If it has, the boys either thought it was a book of traffic rules, and chucked it into the trash can, or gave it to the baby to help him cut the new molars. It happened that your reporter's pride and joy—a sturdy little hell-raiser of one year, got hold of the office copy the other night, and the next morning was laying 5-1 El Chico wouldn't finish in the money in the Kentucky Derby. That merely demonstrates the book's influence on people. For your information, it also comes in handy for fanning the southern extremities of older children, although Prof. Menke does not recommend it for this purpose, nor do we. How would you like to have the winner of the fifth chariot race at Rome, 29 A. D., emblazoned on the seat of your offspring's trousers?

Telephone Calls Increase

But getting back to the great inquiring public, we repeat for emphasis, that it has not been informed of the book's presence on the market. At least the number of telephone calls received nightly by this department haven't abated appreciably in the last few nights. When Mr. Walter Haight extracted his copy of Prof. Menke's work from its bright manila envelope a couple of weeks ago, the entire staff heaved a sigh of relief. Mr. Haight unravelled two of his lengthening chain of chins and registered a broad smile. He planted one hoof on the desk and emitted a blood-curdling Tarzan shriek. (He got that listening to radio cereal programs.)

"Ask me another," he challenged.

But something went amiss. Armed with his copy of Menke's masterpiece (together with other paraphernalia for getting the correct answer or cutting telephone wire when he couldn't answer) Brother Haight sat by the telephone for days, waiting for an inquiring subscriber. But none came. His wife threatened to divorce him because so certain was Brother Haight that sooner or later a call would come in, he refused to leave the 'phone. He sat and sat (it was while sitting that he thought of that Ferdinand the Fighter column—remember) and gradually declined in health and spirit. (The spirits are always low around here, though, after the Christmas supply is exhausted.) Finally, when Haight had dwindled away to a mere 220 pounds (with shoes on) he sadly departed—taking Prof. Menke's book with him.

And then—yes, you guessed it, friends—Brother Haight's telephone started ringing. Another started, and another and another, until all the 'phones were ringing. Not ordinary calls were they, but calls demanding the presence of Menke's little red book. Not race results did the inquiring voices in the 'phone booths want, not game results, not fishing information, but dope that we have only in musty files, but which Menke's little book places at your fingertips.

Who won the first Kentucky Derby? Was it a mile race? Wasn't the Preakness originated in Kentucky. Did Babe Ruth ever play with the Baltimore Orioles? Why not? In how many rounds did Joe Louis knock out Jack Dempsey for the championship? Never met? Are you SURE ABOUT THAT? How many innings in a cricket match? Did Sir Thomas Lipton ever win the Americas Challenge Cup? After whom is the Davis Cup named? Who owns the Chicago Black-

'Me Fuerte,' Says Roberto as Harris Tries to Make Him Stop Pitching Hard

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 14.—Having scant faith in Santa Claus, President Clark Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris, of Washington's Senators, aren't going off the deep end about Senor Roberto Ortiz, but the hefty Cuban's fireball certainly brings a gleam to their eyes.

They kept fingers crossed and laid down a barrage of its, but couldn't suppress some grins today while the strapping rookie cut loose with fast ones that banged in the catcher's mitt like 1-pound gun shots.

One reason the young man seems to belong in the too-good-to-be-true department is that Joe Cambria, minor league club owner, brought him to Harris as an outfielder, having no idea he might be a moundsman.

"No pitch?" he asked with a disappointed expression as Harris waved him to the bench for rest.

"No pitch, today," smiled Harris. "Me fuerte (strong)", spake Roberto. "Me fuerte."

A bystander ventured to ask Griffith, "Is he as fast as Walter Johnson?"

"I don't know," Griffith commented thoughtfully.

That may have been the tip-off to how seriously he regards the new prospect, for the mention of the "big train" in the same breath with any other pitcher usually is the signal for a blowup for the sage of the Senators.

Wilson Beats A. U. Freshmen

Coach Tony Kupka's Woodrow Wilson five, currently tied for first place in the inter-high school series, defeated American University Frosh, 37 to 17, yesterday on the Wilson floor. Led by Bart Fugler, fast-breaking forward, the Wilson team led throughout the game. In the first quarter the Frosh were on the short end of a 10-to-5 count. In this period Fugler made three baskets in rapid succession. He scored a total of 11 points for the game to lead both teams in this respect.

That's merely a partial list—and more are coming in daily. Body Contact as Georgetown, Loyola Tie at Hockey

B. Baker, Loyola defense, is sprawled on the ice after being bowled over by J. Deegan, Georgetown wing, who lost the puck as his opponent body checked him on his wild dash toward the Loyola goal. This action took place in the second period of Washington's first intercollegiate hockey game, played at Ice Palace. The score was a 2-2 tie.

Hoyas Tied, 2-2, on Freak Hockey Shot

A freak shot resulting in a goal for Loyola forced the Georgetown University hockey team to accept a 2-to-2 tie score before some 900 fans in the Chevy Chase Ice Palace last night. The accidental score sent the game into two extra periods, during which neither team could get the puck into the net.

Loyola escaped defeat when Frank Brown slammed a shot while behind the Georgetown goal. The puck struck the back of Goalkeeper Feenan's stick and went into the net. This happened in the second period of the regulation time during which 3 of the 4 points of the game were scored.

But as great a shooter as was Andrews last night, there was one better. George Dewitt, Maryland's lanky, bowlegged forward, continued his sensational pace by rolling up 19 points, one of his highest totals of the season, to remain close on the heels of G. W.'s Bob Faris in the nip-and-tuck District point-getting race.

Besides Dewitt, little Adam Bengoechea was Maryland's star. After being held to three points in the first half, the midget forward broke loose early in the second half and tallied two baskets and a foul in succession and added another goal and a foul for a total of 10 points.

3 Veteran Dogs Are Victors in Westminster

Fallcrest Harry, Airedale, Lone Novice to Win

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 14.—A young Airedale that first was spotted as a champion while he was ducking logs in a Canadian river, and three veterans of big-time dog show competition came through to victory as best of their breeds in four of the major classes contested today in the sixty-third annual Westminster Kennel Club show at Madison Square Garden.

The young Airedale was Fallcrest Harry, owned by T. F. Kenny, a mill owner of Buckingham, Quebec, and handled by Tom Gately, his discoverer. Competing in his first Westminster, Fallcrest Harry scored a surprising triumph by conquering a final field of survivors that included the prize-winning English bitch, Glenmavis Solitaire, a recent importation from Britain and winner last Sunday in the Airedale specialty show.

The breed winners selected yesterday and today will compete tomorrow in the variety classes-sporting breeds, hound breeds, terrier breeds, working breeds, toy breeds and nonsporting breeds. The six survivors from a field of 3,070 will be the finalists in the judging for best-in-show tomorrow night.

solve the unorthodox defensive and offensive methods of their opponents.

Only 40 seconds of the game remained with Anacostia in possession of a 29-28 lead, when Travis, attempting to gain time, intentionally fouled Seaman in mid court. Seaman made both tosses good, ending the scoring, and giving his team its first victory in its last start of the 1939 series.

Another upset was in sight in the Western-Eastern clash. Western tried desperately in the first half to keep its head above the flood of White Tide baskets and succeeded. It trailed 7-6 after one quarter, and by the time the intermission rolled around, it was out in front, 10-9.

The third quarter was its downfall. Except for the side set shot of Jimmy Horn. Western went scoreless, while Eastern's touted offense accounted for 10 points. There was little contest after that, Eastern sending in a full team of reserves in the last quarter.

Junior Soccer Contest Won By Park View

Raymond Team Bows, 4-1; Virginia Avenue Is Forced to Forfeit Game

Only one game was played yesterday in the Playground Junior Soccer League, Park View defeating Raymond, 4-1. Rosedale and Virginia Avenue were unable to muster sufficient players, because of illnesses, and Gallinger forfeited to Hoover.

Park View took an early lead in the game at McMillan playground and had a two-goal lead at the interval, 3-1. The second half was hotly contested and Raymond tried hard to reduce the margin. Several penalty-kicks were awarded but none was converted by either team, and Park View squeezed through a fourth goal near the end of the game.

Cards to Play Baltimore Five in Maryland Tuneup

Battered by virtually every team on its schedule, Catholic University's basketball team still hopes to salvage the Maryland game from a wrecked schedule.

The Cardinals battle Baltimore University at the C. U. gym tonight in the last "tuneup" for the annual meeting with the Terps Monday night.

Coach Fod Cotton intends to employ a zone defense against the strong Maroon quintet tonight in an attempt to familiarize his charges with the Maryland type of play.

Baltimore promises no breathing spell for the hapless Cardinals. Among the Maroons' victims this year have been New York University, Western Maryland, Washington College, Wilson and Penn Military.

C.U. Cagemen Play Baltimore Tonight

Hoping to hit a fast stride for Monday's game with Maryland, Catholic University will attempt to break its three-game losing streak tonight, meeting Baltimore at the Brooklyn gym at 8:15.

The Cardinals whose only victory this season was scored over a Baltimore team—Loyola—have shown improvement recently against strong opponents and hope to score an upset.

Badminton League Opens at Central

The National Capital Badminton League got under way last night at Central gymnasium, with three team matches played between member teams. Y. M. C. A. opened hostilities with a 4-1 trouncing of Takoma, Scott Pollock, of the latter, turning in the only winning effort in singles.

The Alexandria and District teams swept their matches with Capitol and Interior, respectively, each winding up with a 5-0 victory. Bill Shreve and Joel Baker, playing for District, won singles matches and then paired off to take doubles encounters, too.

D. C. Amateurs Box Richmond Team Tonight

President's Birthday Fund Benefit; DeChard In Probable Feature

Amateur boxing will contribute its bit to the President's Birthday fund tonight at Turner's Arena where Washington's Golden Gloves champions encounter the title-holders of Richmond in the season's outstanding match. The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

On paper it shapes up as a worthwhile attraction, with Jimmy De Chard, promising young Washington heavyweight, boxing Cowboy Jones, a rugged individual long before politicians seized upon that phrase, in what probably will be the feature bout. It is hard, however, to point to any one match as the feature. They're all good, in excellent condition, and not only willing but anxious to fight.

The progress of DeChard, however, bears close watching, for Frankie Mann's protege's weight has zoomed from a puny 186 pounds to 197 pounds, and the veteran mentor contends the added weight has put an added zest in the boy's punching. Mann fourthermore says DeChard's speed has not suffered because of the recently acquired poundage.

In Jones, the District entry meets a youngster who absorbs punishment as well as he dishes it out, and he has a small reputation as a kayo artists. If DeChard gets over tonight in good style it is possible that he will make his long-awaited professional debut sooner than expected.

Only one change has been made in the original program, George Pickeral replacing Stan Stephenson against Joe Lewis in a novice class bout. Four novice engagements are scheduled to round out a full evening's entertainment for the fans.

Buster Miller, Willie Tapp, Jim Brady, Steve Thompson, Jim Perrow and Chester Morris are included on the Washington roster that is expected to send the Virginians home on the short end of the score.

Technician Adds to Prestige by Easy Hialeah Park Victory

Woolf's Colt $5.50 Choice In Feature

Silent Witness Second And Get Off Is Third In Distance Contest Flying Mary Victor

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 14.—Herbert M. Woolf's Technician today gained more prestige for the $20,000 added, mile and a furlong Flamingo Stakes, when he easily led home five other 3-year-olds in the Sunny Isles purse, decided over the Flamingo distance. Freddie Smith, scoring a double in the saddle, had the sturdy son of Insco well in hand as he crossed the wire a length and a half clear in 1:50 3-5.

While Technician, one of last year's better juveniles, was boosting his stock for the February 25 fixture, four other hopefuls were losing caste, chiefly Mrs. Payne Whitney's Roll and Toss, the favorite, which lumbered home in last place.

Second money went to C. H. Trotter's Silent Witness, the only starter not named for the Flamingo.

Roll and Toss, which was highly rated early last year but lightly campaigned because of sickness, recently made his first start of the winter and galloped away from fair opposition at a sprint distance. The big gelding had all his speed today, but he failed to maintain it and tired so badly he could not beat a horse. Arcaro sent him clear of the field after making the first turn. The Greentree representative held a comfortable advantage while leading Get Off to the far turn. After starting around the last bend, he curled up completely.

Louis B. Mayer, the film magnate who has built up an elaborate stable, including many purchases at the Saratoga yearling sales last August, won his first race in Florida when Flying Mary scored over a band of juveniles in the opening dash of 3 furlongs. The daughter of Pompey, with Nunzio Pariso in the saddle, was making her debut. She broke on her toes, opened up daylight and carried the blue and pink silks over the wire a length to the good. Maenerva was a fast-closing second, heading the favored Marandan.

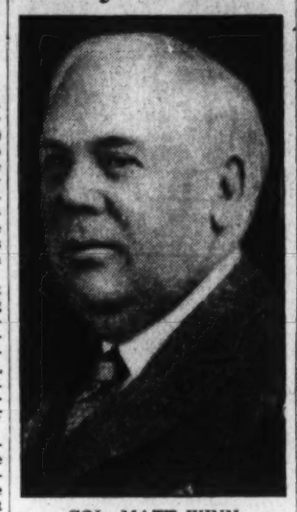
Colonel Winn Expects 'Best Derby Ever'



COL. MATT WINN

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 14.—"Uh, huh," said the multiple-chinned old gent, "we aim to make this Derby the best ever. Looks like it will be, too, with all these young hosses coming along and people more interested in racing than ever before."

He was, of course, Col. Matt Winn, "Old Colonel Racing" himself. He bought Churchill Downs at Louisville in 1902 for $40,000, has shoveled $5,000,000 in for improvements since and has made the track's feature race, the Kentucky Derby, the most famous in the Western Hemisphere.

He is 78, bland, affable and hospitable. He has not bet on a horse race since 1889.

The story of the Kentucky Derby from its first running in 1875, won by Aristides, "the little red horse," to its present magnitude is the Alger story of the turf. The story of Matt Winn, who made it, parallels it, a story of travel, adventure and racing, spiced with the roar of Derby crowds and the thundering hooves of the century's great horses.

"Saw First Derby"

"Yup," said the colonel, pulling on a bourbon, "had a lot of fun in my time. Watched the first Derby from the branch of a tree outside the track and haven't missed one since. Sold groceries in the mountains of Kentucky—I'm a Kentuckian born and bred. Sold clothes in Texas, California and Mexico in the eighties. Then, as the fellow said, I went into racing. I've had a lot of fun."

People always associate the colonel with the Derby, but his racing interests have sprawled all over the United States. He once ran Empire City track in New York and fought Augustus Belmont. He organized the American Turf Association and was its first president. He spent 10 years in Mexico running tracks. In addition to Churchill he manages the tracks at Latonia and Lincoln Fields.

Once described as the only Irish diplomat in captivity, Winn fought racing's battles in Kentucky and elsewhere. When a reform movement forbade bookmaking at Churchhill Downs, Winn reintroduced pari-mutuel betting and the track survived. After the colonel had improved the machines, the system spread.

"Funny thing, those fellers did us a good turn," said he with a chuckle. "I saw that pari-mutuels were the thing of the future and racing all over benefited."

"We had plenty of trouble with the Derby at first," he recalled. "It was a Western race and it was hard to make it a big attraction.

"Publicity" Big Factor

"Publicity did more than anything else. We didn't have any real publicity man, but I got around a lot and talked to owners. Pretty soon the big Eastern owners started to enter their horses. We raised the purse from $4,850 to $50,000, added by degrees, and got bigger, better fields and large grounds. The two firms that ran Churchill before I did never made a nickle. I've never lost money on it."

The publicity was the colonel himself. He has a tremendous acquaintanceship among racing people. Few owners could withstand him when he pleaded with them to "send your horses to the Kentucky Derby, it's the biggest race in the country." Then came three consecutive races that made Winn and the Derby.

Donerail, the 1913 winner, took the thirty-ninth Derby at odds of 92 to 1. The long price was great publicity. Old Rosebud, the next winner and a Louisville-owned horse, won in 2:03 2-5, a track record. Then Regret, the first and only filly to win, carried the late Harry Payne Whitney's silks to victory. This triumph by an Eastern owner started the influx of Eastern owners, made the Derby a national affair.

"Then, too," said the colonel, "don't forget it's run in Kentucky. To Americans Kentucky means horses and horse racing."

READY-ABOUT, well ridden, went forwardly on the outside early, began to better her position after entering the stretch, shook off the leaders in the final furlong and held the field safe at the end. NANAHCUB improved her position steadily, swung around the leaders through the stretch, closed gamely to punishment and outstayed the others. LITTLE HARPIST, slow to get going, came around the entire field in the last quarter mile, made up much ground and would have been second in another stride. AMERCUP broke slowly, but made up much ground and finished strong between the leaders. BRIGHT SPOT displayed good speed, took a clear lead on the stretch turn, but weakened in the final drive.

The latter, slow to get going, worked his way up when obtaining clear passage on the inside and was wearing the winner down at the finish. VEEKS, also tardy to settle into his stride, circled the field in the final three furlongs and closed with a rush. MR. BUDDY, prominent early, faltered under punishment in the final drive.

SPIN ON, displaying more speed than usual under energetic handling, made a game bid while circling the field on the stretch turn, but could not get up. GREEDAN, in the thick of contention all the way, faltered in the stretch run.

SHAMBLES bettered his position steadily on the outside after entering the backstretch and, continuing determinedly when the final test came, wore CORONADO down at the finish. CORONADO, hustled to the lead going into the backstretch, held an even pace while saving ground, but faltered when challenged. J. The latter, rated off the early pace, moved up gamely entering the stretch and was wearing the winner down in the last strides. A heavy short covering move—primarily for European account—whisked cottonseed oil futures 25 to 33 points net higher today before the late hedge selling cut down top marks to final gains of 20 to 22 points.

Stimulating the advance, according to market observers, were reports Germany was bartering with Western farmers for their lard.

Sales totaled 424 lots: March, 8.64; May, 8.03@8.32; July, 6.90; September, 6.97.

Crude oil was quoted 5¼@5¾ in the Southwest and valley, and 5¼ nominal in Texas.

Chrysler Corp. Votes $1 a Share On Common Stock

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 14.—Directors of Chrysler Corporation today declared a dividend of $1 a share on common stock. Previous payment was $1.25 in December. Other 1938 dividends were 25 cents in September and 50 cents in June.

The company reported net earnings for the year 1938 consolidated net profit of $18,798,294, equal to $4.32 a share on common stock. This compared with $50,729,211 in 1937, or $11.66 a common share.

The latest dividend is payable March 14 to holders of record February 24. No dividend was paid at this time last year. Sales for 1938 were $413,250,511, against $769,807,839 in 1937.

K. T. Keller, president, said that "sales and earnings for the year 1938 reflect the fact that business suffered a precipitous decline in the latter part of 1937 and remained during 1938 at levels substantially below volume of the preceding year.

Indicated profits for the December quarter were $12,126,416, equal to $2.79 a share on common stock, which compared with $962,278, or 22 cents a share, in the last quarter of 1937. The December 31 balance sheet showed $70,403,318 in cash compared with $35,397,377 at the end of 1937.

Gifford to Resign From U. S. Steel Board

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Walter S. Gifford, president of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., will withdraw as a director of U. S. Steel Corporation on April 3, Edward R. Stettinus, jr., chairman of U. S. Steel, announced today.

Gifford, it was said, feels that his other responsibilities make it inadvisable for him to continue his duties with U. S. Steel for another three-year team. In his place the management, Stettinius said, will nominate Robert C. Stanley, president of International Nickel Co.

SEC May Act Against Silent Witnesses

Transamerica Inquiry Punitive Procedure Pondered for Four

The Securities and Exchange Commission may take court action against four witnesses who refused to testify yesterday in the stock delisting proceeding against Transamerica Corporation, Giannini-controlled bank holding company of the Pacific Coast.

This was disclosed yesterday by O. John Rogge, counsel for the commission in the hearing to determine whether Transamerica stock should be stricken from the boards of stock exchanges because of charges that the company falsified financial statements.

At Rogge's request, the Transamerica hearing was adjourned until March 20 to give the commission time to take such action as it sees fit against the four witnesses.

May Seek Punitive Action

Rogge announced that he would ask the commission to seek punitive action against the witnesses under a criminal statute or to apply to the District Supreme Court for an order compelling them to testify.

The witnesses—Margaret Mallory, personal secretary to A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board of Transamerica; Charles J. Smith, former San Francisco broker; W. E. Clayton, jr., secretary-treasurer, and Carl Stamer, vice president of the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co.—refused, on advice of counsel, to furnish information concerning the company.

"Outrageous!" Says Rogge

The witnesses refused to testify on the ground that the SEC had no right to investigate affairs of the Pacific Coast Mortgage Co. in connection with its Transamerica investigation.

Miss Mallory and Smith were asked if it were true that 10,000 shares of the capital stock of the mortgage company were registered in their names in 1935. Clayton and Stamer were questioned concerning what, if any, profits the company made in trading in Transamerica stock, and what, if any, payments it made to A. P. Giannini.

Blocked Second Time

It was the second time Rogge had been blocked in an effort to inquire into $350,000 of compensation which he alleges Giannini received as a result of deals by Pacific Coast Mortgage in Transamerica stock. On the previous occasion, the commission enlarged its stock delisting order to permit him to develop this phase of the investigation.

Transamerica contends Pacific Coast mortgage was sold in 1932 to A. O. Stewart, who resigned a few weeks ago as chairman of the board of the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank.

Giannini "Disillusioned"

San Francisco, Feb. 14 (U.P.).—A. P. Giannini, West Coast financial leader who has been one of the warmest supporters of the New Deal, said today upon his return from a series of Securities and Exchange Commission hearings in Washington that he was "disillusioned." He said he found "bright young men, fresh from academic halls, completely uninformed of life and experience in the ways of business, dominating important councils."

Stocks Show Slight Declines in Light Trading Day; New York Traction Issues Feature Dull Bond Market

New York, Feb. 14.—The lethargy in financial markets was continued today and on the stock exchange only 418,390 shares changed hands, making it the lightest day since last September 6, the day following Labor Day. Prices moved in accordance with this lack of interest, the composite for the entire list showing a small decline of 0.19 point.

Lower grade rails, store shares, utilities and the oils gave the best performance, holding at about their closing levels of last Saturday, while some heaviness developed in the steels and equipments, with the motors soft. Fractional fluctuations were the rule in all groups of shares, however, only a handful of the speculative favorites moving as much as a point away from last week's close. The holiday weekend brought nothing to alter the view of the street toward the market.

Signs Are Heartening

While the dullness is disheartening to traders and brokers alike, there is the possibility that we are in a situation like that which existed last May and June. The market, for a long period, held regularly under 500,000 shares a day but from that condition we went into the period of enthusiasm which carried through to the close of 1938. The hope is that history will repeat and it is worthy of note that while the list remains irregular, it gives ground grudgingly and the pressure to sell appears to be light.

Foreign News Unfavorable

Indeed the bullish forces are inclined to term this a caveat benditor market in which the seller must beware. The bearish forces had some news to their liking today but there was no spirited reflection of it in trading. A major part of the unfavorable news was international and included the expropriation by Mexico of sugar lands which are largely American owned, rumored unsettlement along the Russian-Japanese front and the prospect of a speech by Mussolini Sunday.

On the domestic front there was the failure of a large Jersey City bank on reported frozen real estate loans. Among individual group movements there was pressure throughout the day against the so-called Schulte group, following the final judgment in the United States Court over the week-end enjoining D. A. Schulte from further alleged violations of the securities act. Most active of this group was Dunhill International, off about 2 points and at a new low. Pressure also was marked against the two Schulte stores issues.

Tractions Supported

Well supported were the tractions, with B. M. T. the most active and rising ¾ while the preferred was up 1½. Interborough also was higher. Buying followed the revelation that the transit unification plan, under negotiation for the last year, will be made public within a month. Also well supported were the United States Rubber issues, the preferred reaching a new high on hopes of better dividend treatment at the next meeting.

Chrysler Meeting Interest

Chrysler and General Motors were about even with their former prices, interest centering on the Chrysler meeting after the close at which a dividend of $1 was declared. The report for 1938 revealed the expected sharp decline in earnings as compared with 1937; even though there was a great improvement in the final quarter, and what can happen to investors when a big corporation experiences a decline was seen in the comparative figures on dividend payments. Common stockholders got more than $43,000,000 in 1937 against slightly over $8,000,000 last year.

Bonds Generally Dull

Listed bonds were irregular today, with a dull downward trend of speculative securities relieved by improvement in investment bonds in a few special groups, such as the local tractions issues. Some foreign default bonds also were better, despite the aloofness of Secretary Morgenthau to any suggestion of caution in official lending to the defaulters. The performances indicated that any reason for bidding up bonds is accepted readily. The lack of investment or speculative interest in most issues is reflected by a turnover of only $5,130,000.

Traction Issues Improve

Local traction bonds improved 1 to 2 points on reports that unification contracts are steadily being drawn up and may be ready for signature before many more weeks. The large group of speculative carrier bonds was idle, with small losses numerous, although gains also appeared in numbers.

Banker Advocates Newspapers for Trust Advertising

New York, Feb. 14 (AP).—Towner Phelan, assistant vice president of the St. Louis (Mo.) Union Trust Co., asserted today that newspaper advertising should constitute the backbone of a trust institution advertising program.

Speaking before the midwinter trust conference of the American Bankers Association, he said: "Newspaper advertising will reach the entire public; it will tend to build and maintain the background of public confidence which is the foundation of trust business; it will contribute to favorable public opinion, which is our only protection against adverse legislation; it will inform the public about trust service and will do much to dispel ignorance, remove prejudice, correct misinformation and educate the public to the advantages of trust service. . . .

"We must not limit our advertising merely to those people who are prospects for trust service, but must advertise to the entire public."

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 14.—Most prices found a firm footing in today's stock market. Transatlantics moved evenly, helped by continental support. Oils attracted interest at generally higher levels, especially the twin eagle shares. Copper, gold and rubber shares were well maintained. British gilt edged bonds ended lower despite late support. Small gains and losses were well mixed in the industrial section.

Paris—Uneven price movements featured dealings in the bourse today. Rentes ended 25 to 110 centimes down and Bank of France lost 100 francs. Suez Canal and Royal Dutch slipped narrowly.

Liverpool—Helped by firmer overseas cables and local short covering in nearby positions, cotton futures closed 1 to 3 points higher today. Wheat futures ended at the day's tops and ½ to 1 penny up on buying believed to represent lifting of hedges against cash wheat sales to Spain and United Kingdom millers.

Wheat Prices Edge Higher In Dull Day

Rally in Fnal Hour
Export Business Slow
Corn Is Irregular

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Wheat prices closed with net fractional gains today after a dull session. Modest buying that developed in the final hour was largely in sympathy with a substantial advance at Liverpool over the week-end. There was no improvement in market activity here however, with the resumption of trading after the double holiday.

Most dealings represented small orders in connection with wheat or flour sales. Lagging export business and absence of outstanding market discouraged the trade from taking a definite stand in the pit.

Wheat closed ¼@½ higher than Saturday, May, 67⅞@68; July 68⅛@68; corn, ⅛ off to ½ up; May, 48½@48¾; July, 49¾; oats, ⅛@¼ higher; rye unchanged to ⅜ up; lard 20@25 higher.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The shell game, three-card monte, thimble-rigging aliases for juggling peas under thimbles, coins under shells, aces in the palm, have been a source of revenue to nimble-fingered charlatans for years and years. Some say the game was invented by the Egyptians, others attribute it to the ancient fakirs of India, but whatever its orgin, it has provided the staff of life to petty cheats since the world can remember and still is.

You will need more than three shells and three coins to solve the play of today's hand, sent to us by contributer I. N. who delights in teasing problem solvers.

The hand and bidding is given in the box. The contract is four spades, doubled. Try your luck, but be sure to make declarer's play invulnerable to any attack by East and West.

Solution to problem contributed by I. N.

South wins the first trick with the ace of clubs and leads the five of diamonds. West must go up with the ace, else declarer has a choice of plays to make the contract.

If West now leads the queen of clubs, declarer trumps small in dummy, cashes his king of diamonds, and trumps a small diamond. He re-enters dummy, finessing the heart suit, and leads the last diamond and trumps. East can discard a heart or a club, but all he can win is two spade tricks. He is endplayed, having to lead into dummy's hand after declarer finesses the heart suit again and cashes the ace.

If West, after winning the ace of diamonds, leads the queen of diamonds, declarer takes with dummy's king. He plays the queen of spades and East must win with his king, else the hand can be cross-ruffed.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable

WEST DEALER

	♠ A Q 8 4 ♡ A Q J 10 ◇ K 9 6 3 ♣ 6
♠ None ♡ K 8 5 ◇ A Q J 7 ♣ K Q J 8 5 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ K J 7 5 ♡ 9 6 3 ◇ 8 4 2 ♣ 9 7 4
	♠ 10 9 6 3 2 ♡ 7 4 2 ◇ 10 5 ♣ A 10 3

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dbl.	Pass	2 ♠
3 ♣	4 ♠	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♣

If East plays back a diamond, declarer trumps, takes a finesse in hearts, and leads the spade four from dummy East wins with the jack and returns either a spade or a club. The ace of spades is played from dummy in either case, leaving the eight as entry to the South hand so that East's remaining two trumps can be picked up and the hearts finessed again.

If East plays back a club, after taking the king of spades, it is trumped in dummy with the ace, and the four spades is led. East wins this with the jack, and leads his last club, dummy ruffs, a diamond is trumped by declarer, and the two good spades are taken, which squeezes West in diamonds and hearts. One finesse will pick up the king of hearts, or dummy's nine of diamonds will be good for the last trick.

South makes four spades, doubled, losing two spades and a diamond.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

WITH whatever apprehension on their parts, certain quarters here are warning against a spread of the caste system in the Federal service.

They have become cognizant of all the talk about the glories of the British civil service and have seen, to their pain, they say, the encroachment of people with caste system ideas upon the Federal Government.

There is a caste system school of thought over the Federal way. It has crept up in the maneuvers of many well-known officials and manipulators who say the best talent can be gotten for the Government from "favored schools."

So these favored individuals from the favored institutions of learning are brought in by the hand-picking method, to take the jobs at the very top that might have gone to some employe who through years of effort had prepared himself for the spot and in the belief that a merit system already was operating or if not operating would do so in time.

The principal believers, to date, in this matter of favored individuals in favored schools of learning have been the top men in the Federal legal services. The Agriculture Department and the Justice Department are outstanding in this caste belief. The Treasury legal service has also had its moments.

It's quite British, you know.

The point is that the hour has come when such inroads as caste has made can be completely buckled. The President's committee of seven probably doesn't realize what a fine opportunity it has.

It also has a world of support. Speakers at national civil service week celebration here said to a man that trouble was in the offing once the gates to civil employment were closed against the individual American and opened only to the selected few—the few who, for example, could present evidence that they spent some time at a favored institution of learning.

The most recent blast ensued from the executive committee of the American Federation of Government Employes: "The council held that the (A. F. G. E.) should oppose any attempt to reserve for graduates of any favored educational institutions the higher civil service positions in such a way as to exclude otherwise qualified employes in the service."

And "the council declared that experience, seniority and character should be the principal factors in promotions within the service; that jobs should be filled by promotions within the service whenever qualified persons may be obtained in that manner . . ."

Under the British system—which some circles say is desirable—administrative, executive, clerical and other classes are set up. There is little opportunity for an employe to rise from the class in which he entered the service.

The committee of seven has the opportunity of removing the caste idea entirely from the service. However obscure it may be now, the root can be struck out and there will be no chance of its spreading at this time when a real merit system may, under the set-up—be a little better than a possibility.

Notes: Brightening the day for Office of Education employes (Interior) was a telegram from the movie star, Shirley Ross, saying, "Please send me your booklet 'Americans All—Immigrants All; I wash to commend this most educational and humane program of the air" . . . The West Virginia State Society gives its twenty-fifth anniversary dinner at the Raleigh Hotel tonight. Senator M. M. Neely will be guest of honor and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson will be guest speaker. Added feature will be a display of products and manufactures from the industries of the State . . . St. Elizabeth's Hospital Lodge 28, A. F. G. E., gives an oyster feast, 6 p. m. to 1 a. m., tomorrow night at the Fort Carroll Tavern, 3715 Nichols avenue southeast. On the committee are Carrie Brooks, Frank Maxey, Mary R. Copsey, Mabel Barrett, Florence Harmon, Myrtle Webster, Grace Guy, Myrtle Spudis, Mozelle Teter, Jesse Harris, Charlotte Skinner, Benson Taylor, jr., William Green, David Bowman, Loren Landman, Leo Lojocono, Ainsworth Tucker and Felix Brocks.

Bob Burns Says—

A girl had a fallin' out with her sweetheart an' went up in the air fer 2,000 miles. When she came down again, she found she'd flown from Los Angeles to Chicago an' there was a telegram at the airport fer her. "Dearest, come back at once and' I'll marry you!" the telegram said. So she did what most women do, sooner or later, she changed her mind an' her direction an' went up in the air once more. When she came down this trip she was right back where she'd started from, an' the boy friend was a-waitin' fer her with the parson. All in all, she'd traveled 4,000 miles to get her man, which is a record even fer the mounted police!

My Aunt Matilda sez a man could save a lot of time an' trouble lettin' a woman have her own way in the first place. I s'pect that's right, only it don't look to me like a woman enjoys it so much unless us menfolks put up a fuss an' then sort of give in at the last moment, as though we're makin' a great concession. When I've given in to my wife too easy, she's said: "All right, Bob—jes' fer that, I won't do it!" So, you see—you gotta be careful even agreein' with a woman!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The King's Follower

Who saves the scraps won't starve at least;
Enough of crumbs will make a feast.
—Old Mother Nature.

Who would be a king without followers? Snow King the Polar Bear, who rules in the Far North where snow and ice prevail the greater part of the year, has at least one faithful follower who tries to go wherever the king goes, even out on the great fields of ice far from land. It is Spunky the Arctic Fox, northern cousin of Reddy Fox whom you all know.

He is called Spunky because it takes spunk, a lot of it, to face an Arctic winter. Yes, sir, it certainly does. Where others would starve somehow Spunky manages to find enough food to not only keep alive, but to keep him active and strong.

In summer Spunky lived well. There was no trouble at all in getting all he wanted to eat. Then he lived on land and there were Lemmings and Hares and birds. Many feathered folk go way up to that northernmost land to rest, especially birds of the sea. Their nests are on the ground and it would be a stupid Fox who could not live well on eggs and young so easily obtained. He is thrifty too, is Spunky the Arctic Fox, for in those days of plenty he carefully hid away little stores of food, meat that he could not eat when obtained. And because in that Arctic land one need dig but a little way dawn to reach ice his stored supplies would keep. The summer was short. Soon snow and ice covered all the land the great fields of ice formed in the sea. It was then that Snow King the Polar Bear deserted the land for these ice fields.

Spunky noticed this. "If a great fellow like that can get a living out there a little fellow like me ought to be able to," muttered Spunky. So at a respectful distance he followed Snow King. The latter took no notice. He may not have been aware that he was being followed.

So they traveled across the great ice floes toward the open sea and along the edge of this Snow King stalked a Seal. Spunky sat down to wait and watch. He knew what Snow King was doing and he was too smart, far too smart, to do anything that might in any way interfere with that careful stalk. He saw the great Bear catch that Seal and he waited patiently until Snow King had eaten his fill and sought a sheltered place for an after-dinner nap. Then the white Fox ate his dinner picking up every little scrap and gnawing clean the bones that Snow King had left.

He licked his lips with a satisfied air. In his turn he took a nap, curling up in the snow so that with his black nose buried in the long hair of his white tail and his eyes closed he looked so much a part of his surroundings that not even the keenest eyes would have recognized him from no more than a few yards away.

From that time on he was a constant follower of Snow King, never allowing the latter to get so far away that he would lose track of him. He did some hunting for himself, now and then finding something he could eat cast up on the ice. But chiefly he depended on Snow King to supply his meals. When the latter went hungry he went hungry. When the latter feasted he usually feasted too.

When the king took to the water, as he often did, Spunky could not follow. He shivered at the mere thought of entering that water. He has a thick warm coat but it is not waterproof as is Snow King's. Had he fallen into the sea he would soon have been so chilled that he would have perished. So when Snow King took to the water all Spunky could do was to follow along on the ice and keep him in sight as best he could.
